Optimism in Detroit. Mr. Ford Goes Upstairs. Would Canada Trade? A Map, and 63 Cents.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

DETROIT, May 27.

THERE ARE signs of cheerfulness, although 12,000,000 unemployed may find the statement hard to believe.

There was cheerfulness in the Grand Central Station leaving New York Thursday.

A railroad man walked the full length of the platform to tell you that the Twentieth Century, the Ohio State Limited, the Wolverine, the Lake Shore Limited, the Niagara and the Mount Royal Limited are all running in two sections.

Within six hours, twelve long double-section trains pulling out of one station. That's cheerful, and new.

"THE ONE fare plus a quarter round trip" explains part of it. The Pennsylvania and other roads report similar improved traffic conditions.

When railroads bring themselves up to date and carry thirty passengers 125 miles an hour in cars weighing 15,000 pounds instead of carrying twenty passengers forty miles an hour in cars weighing 180,000 pounds, the public will travel, and railroads will make more money than they ever made, at less than half the present fare.

THE FEDERAL Reserve Bank report that Detroit stores lead in sales gain for April means little, due to the fact that Detroit in its bank moratorium was hit harder and for a longer time than any other city.

What does mean a great deal is the fact that Mr. Oscar Webber, head of the Hudson Company and recognized among merchants as one of the ablest in the United States, takes a cheerful view of conditions and the improvement for the month of May.

Detroit depends largely for prosperity, spending money and wages on the automobile industry, and the improvement that Mr. Webber sees written in his sales report means a corresponding improvement in Detroit's greatest industry and its payrolls.

A GOOD DEAL of Detroit is away in Chicago for the exposition opening today. Practically all of General Motors, Mr. Sloan, Mr. Knudsen, Mr. Klinglar, Mr. Grant, Mr. Kettering, have gone to open the General Motors Building on the lake front.

HENRY FORD was at Dearborn, to receive at luncheon Mr. G. F. DeAssis Brasil, and members of his family. Mr. Brasil, who came from Brazil to discuss with President Roosevelt matters important to both countries, is Brazilian ambassador to the Argentine.

HE CAME accompanied by his son and his charming wife and daughter. Going upstairs on his way to the dining room, Henry Ford, absent-mindedly whistling, went up three steps at a time, a considerable feat for a man of seventy, who has recently undergone a severe operation.

To a fat man, who said "If I did that, I could not breathe for half an hour," Mr. Ford replied:

"And if I were you, I would keep on doing it until you could breathe."

MR. FORD'S luncheon party included M. C. Meigs, vice president of the American Weekly, who knows more about old-fashioned steam engines than anybody except Henry Ford.

Also present were Edsel Ford and W. C. Cowling, whose business is distributing automobiles after the Ford organization makes them.

Madame Brasil used exclamations in English, Spanish, Portuguese and French expressing her wonder as she watched automobiles "coming down the line" and running off under their own power like animated biscuits coming from an oven.

SHE AND her husband were deeply impressed by an automobile two years old, standing apart marked in big letters "Twenty Millionth Ford."

The cars of which that was number 20,000,000 could carry at one time the entire population of the United States.

THE HONORABLE Gus Kasch, in the Ohio Legislature, has interesting "trades" in mind. He would have Uncle Sam trade all of Alaska for "the islands south of the center of the St. Lawrence" and he would have England cancel her war debt to us and give us Canada instead of cash.

Can you imagine the enthusiasm in Canada when the news spreads, considering that Canada has in the ground more than enough gold to pay that war debt, to say nothing of silver, nickel, iron and the Lord knows what.

AS FOR Alaska, there is no knowing how much wealth is hidden away there.

It would, however, be a good idea if Canada would annex the United States, and then let Mexico annex them both, and run the whole thing on a "majority vote" basis.

CHARLEY LEGG, 14, bent on seeing Chicago's exposition, which opens today, started from West Caldwell, N. J., on his bicycle with a road map and 63 cents in his pocket. Police saw the map sticking out, sent Charley home, and everybody said:

"Foolish boy, do you think you can go anywhere in the United States with sixty-three cents?"

If Benjamin Franklin or Thomas A. Edison had done the

THEVENOW'S WIFE ALIVE, POLICE SAY

Purse, Coat on Bridge Believed Those of Pirate's Bride

BULLETIN.

Mrs. Helen Thevenow, bride of Tommy Thevenow, Pirate utility infielder, believed to have committed suicide by jumping into the Monongahela River, is alive, police reported today.

Edward Russell, plainclothesman attached to Center Avenue Station, said Thevenow had received a letter from his wife postmarked 10 a. m. today in Pittsburgh, announcing that she would return in a few days.

The bride of Tommy Thevenow, utility infielder of the Pittsburgh Pirates, today was believed by police to be a suicide. Police are searching the Monongahela River for the body.

A purse bearing her monogram, HHT, with the T in larger type splitting the H's, found early yesterday on the Twenty-second Street Bridge, was identified by John Dodds, manager of the Loutellis Apartments, where the Thevenows lived, as belonging to the ball player's wife. She disappeared Wednesday night following a difference with her husband, it was reported.

The initials on the purse corresponded with those of Mrs. Thevenow. Before her marriage to Thevenow in Madison, Ind., last February, she was Helen Hargitt, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Z. B. Hargitt.

FINDS PURSE, COAT

Harry Maginn, of 207 Boggs avenue, Mt Washington, told police a woman dressed in a red coat with black dots passed him on the bridge early yesterday. A short time later he found the purse on the walk and the coat was hanging on the iron work of the railing.

Last night Thevenow summoned President W. E. Benswanger, of the ball club, to the apartment and revealed that his wife was missing. The two visited police headquarters and learned of the finding of the coat and purse. While Thevenow did not see the purse, he was said to have reported it answered the description of one his wife carried. Because of his nervous condition, two detectives remained with Thevenow during the night.

Later President Benswanger and Manager George Gibson searched for the missing woman. Thevenow was to view the coat and purse at South Side Police Station today.

SCHEDULE IN PURSE

In the purse, police said, were a season schedule of the Pirates, a grocery list and some small personal belongings.

Thevenow, 29, is from Madison, Ind. He was the batting star of the Cardinals in a world series several years ago, and came to Pittsburgh in 1931 in a trade with Philadelphia for Dick Bartell.

State Supreme Court Jurists on Morgan List Attacked

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, May 27.—In a scathing denunciation of the practices of J. P. Morgan & Co., Gov. Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, today demanded that two justices of the State Supreme Court resign.

His demand was directed at Justices William I. Schaffer and John W. Kephart, who admitted they purchased stock while on the "preferred list" of the Morgan concern.

The Governor's statement followed one of a similar nature made by Warren Van Dyke, Democratic state chairman. The Governor said:

"I call upon Justice Kephart and Justice Schaffer to resign."

'FREE COURTS'

"If I had the power I would remove them at once. The people of Pennsylvania are entitled to courts that are wholly free from the suspicion of secret relations with public utilities, public utility bankers, or the high priests of concentrated wealth.

"One of the most shocking revelations in the whole history of public life in this country is told in the newspapers of the last two days."

That was Gov. Pinchot's characterization of developments growing out of the United States Senate inquiry into the Morgan banking interests. His statement continued:

"At last the Morgan investigation lets us look under the lid of big business. And under the lid are men of power and influence in the nation and the state taking secret favors worth large sums of money from Wall street, from the head center of concentrated wealth in America.

"This is how the money power operates a deliberate plan to

The Tax Racket

IGNORANCE armed with votes, inspired by demagogy and officered by political cowardice, is a hard army to rout.

Up to date it has held the field in Congress against all attempts to reform federal taxation and to put it upon a just and intelligent basis.

But, at last, appearances indicate that the lines of Congressional obstinacy are beginning to waver. Stupidity finds itself surrounded by facts. Realities are always terrifying to fakirs.

The poor old income tax, like a galled and jaded steed, is ready to drop in its tracks. It can no longer respond, even by the twitch of a muscle, to the whip of the political hack, who has foolishly taken a position against the sales tax, and has no "out" except the pretense—and he knows it is only a pretense---of increasing the income tax.

THE INCOME TAX HAS BROKEN DOWN!

This can no longer be disputed. As a source of revenue it has reached the last stage of dilapidation—the higher its rates, the less its yield.

Theoretically, as well as in point of results, it has passed out of the field of practical revenue measures.

In addition, it has become hateful to the people. It reeks with scandal and oppression.

A wave of public anger is rising throughout the country, not only against the tax for its infamous partiality to the rich and its cruel injustice to the average man, but against the government, which is more and more identified in the popular mind with the contemptible methods employed in its assessment and collection.

The disclosures before the Senate committee which is investigating the House of Morgan, show how our rich and powerful citizens methodically, and with claim of legality, avoid the payment of income tax and snap their fingers at the so-called rigors of the law.

Not so with the small merchant or the modest professional man who makes honest return to the government of his unpretentious gains. He does not snap his fingers at the law. He cannot afford

NEW HIGHS MADE ON GOLD BAN

Biggest Saturday In History of Exchange

International News Service.

NEW YORK, May 27.—A record-breaking buying avalanche which sent stocks up 1 to 8 points to new highs for the year in the biggest Saturday in the history of the Stock Exchange, was Wall street's answer today to the administration's action to repeal the gold clause in contracts.

The ticker was swamped by enormous buying orders and fell steadily behind until at the close it was 30 minutes late. Volume was around 5,000,000 shares.

Profit-taking was tremendous, but this was absorbed with only temporary setbacks as inflation sentiment reached fever pitch again and final prices were generally at the day's highs.

The advance was accompanied by an uprush in commodities and strength in bonds while the dollar crashed against foreign currencies.

Gold stocks were the pacemakers. Close behind were the rails and farm stocks, while leaders like du Pont, American Can, Steel common and preferred, Allied Chemical, American Telephone and the alcohol issues were at the head of the boom.

Congress Speeds Repeal Of Gold Payment Clause

WASHINGTON, May 27.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt today authorized the Board of Trustees of the Postal Savings system to purchase $100,000,000 in government bonds.

At the same time steps to expedite congressional action on the Steagall-Fletcher Bill to cancel the gold payment clause in government and private contracts were taken today in the House.

The House Banking Committee met at the call of Chairman Steagall (Dem.), of Alabama, and planned to report the measure before nightfall. No hearings were contemplated.

A written explanation of the measure by Assistant Secretary Acheson of the Treasury was submitted. Steagall said:

"This measure ratifies, reaffirms, confirms and makes legal a situation now existing. We are off the gold standard. I don't know whether we'll ever get back on it or not. That is not worrying me as much as going off the gold standard did.

"This bill will put us on a managed currency basis. It will broaden our currency basis.

"It frees us home and abroad of dependence on gold.

"It is a declaration of economic independence. It will restore prosperity."

Gandhi Exhausted As Fast Nears End

POONA, India, May 27.—(AP.)—Apart from a slight return of nausea, the general condition of the Mahatma Kandhi, on the nineteenth day of his three weeks fast against "untouchability," was good today, but he was increasingly weak and seriously exhausted.

He was confident of sufficient control over himself to be able to endure the remaining two days and make a good recovery.

WIDOW SLAIN, SON HUNTED

FLINT, Mich., May 27.—(INS.)—Beaten to death with a gilded metal book-end, the body of Mrs. Bruce McDonald, 54, widow of a wealthy banker, was found today in her show-place home on Crescent Drive.

Police started an immediate search for her son, Balfe, 17, who was missing.

Police said a detective had been stationed at the palatial McDonald home until midnight, after Mrs. McDonald reported that she and her son had "a serious argument," and demanded protection.

JURY ACQUITS ON 1ST BALLOT

John Coyne, Jr., 21, was freed by a jury today in the fatal wounding of his father's girl bride, Irene Carbert Coyne.

After retiring to deliberate at 6 o'clock last night, the jury cast their first ballot at 10 p. m. It was unanimous for acquittal.

Accompanied by his brothers and a few friends, young Coyne heard the verdict at the opening of court this morning. He left the courtroom quietly. His father was not present.

Coyne was charged with shooting to death the 19-year-old bride of his 66-year-old father, at the latter's home, 3424½ Ward street.

Six of Morgan's Partners Owe Firm, Quiz Told

WASHINGTON, May 27.—(AP.)—Though the Senate investigation of the Morgan banking house was suspended for the week-end, the inquisitors today gave to the public fresh news—that half a dozen of the 20 partners of the firm are in debt to it.

The names of the six were withheld, but the information was considered of importance by some of the Senators who, pointing out that national banks are not permitted to make loans to their own officers, maintain private banks such as J. P. Morgan's should be under government regulation and subject to similar restrictions.

FRENCH FACES GIANTS

FORBES FIELD, May 27.—The first-plate Pirates realized they had a Tartar on their hands this afternoon as they prepared to take on the New York Giants in the second and last game of the series between the two leading clubs. The Giants won yesterday's contest and thus reduced the Buccaneer lead to two games.

Larry French loosened up for mound action and the Bucs expected to be heckled by Carl Hubbell, who also is a lefthander. The Giants have defeated the Pirates four times in five clashes this year.

TOKIO, May 27.—(INS.)—Fifty-eight persons are known to have been killed in an explosion today at the Mitsui coal mine at Toyaharagun, on Saghalien Island. The fate of 400 others could not immediately be determined.

Officials blamed an electrical short circuit for the blast.

TAX BILL FIGHT GOES TO SENATE

By WILLIAM S. NEAL

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—President Roosevelt's "prosperity bill"—embracing a new deal for industry and the jobless but providing a heavier tax for the little income taxpayer and the average citizen—was sent to the Senate today after its passage in the House.

The bill, which suspends anti-trust laws to permit combination of industry and labor and carries a $3,300,000,000 public works program and a $700,000,000 tax plan, probably will be called up in the Senate late next week.

Drastic revision of the tax plan in the Senate was forecast as a result of revelations in the Morgan inquiry and widespread opposition to harsh tax increases upon the average citizen.

Before final passage a bi-partison coalition proposed to substitute a manufacturers' sales tax for the income tax boost, gasoline tax, bank check tax and other miscellaneous sales tax, but the effort failed, 137 to 265.

Gates of World Fair Thrown Open

Actual Start of Expo Lacks Ceremony At Chicago

CHICAGO, May 27.—(AP.)—A Century of Progress International Exposition, Chicago's second World Fair, opened its gates today.

Conceived five years ago in the flush of the greatest prosperity ever known, its creation rode safely the rising tide of unprecedented economic distress that engulfed innumerable projects promoted in the same golden days of good times.

Today it was dedicated as "a saga of achievement against huge odds and a drama of determination."

The gates were flung open at 8:30 a. m. and the vanguard of what is hoped will be an eventual attendance of 50,000,000 began to stream through the roads, the streets and the parts of a city man made out of the waters of Lake Michigan. The fair will close November 1.

The actual opening was without ceremony. The clicking of the turnstiles, however, was followed by a day of pageantry yesterday, including an official dedication by Postmaster General James A. Farley, representing President Roosevelt. As a climax tonight science will loose a ray from the star arctures to turn the switch lighting all buildings.

Those interested in noting the star Arcturus, the light from which is to start the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago tonight, may do so by following these directions:

Find the Great Dipper constellation and follow the curve of the handle for about the same distance as the handle and there will be seen a brightly glowing star. This is Arcturus at the lower end of the kite-shaped constellation Bootes and so far away it takes its beams 40 years to reach the earth.

Rays which emanated from the star in 1893 will be caught by astronomers, among them Dr. Frank Jordan of Allegheny Observatory, focused on photo-electric equipment of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, and the impulse amplified and transmitted to receiving apparatus at the fair grounds in Chicago, thereby turning on the entire lighting system.

Wife Didn't Like Songs, Heller Gets Divorce

CHICAGO, May 27.—(AP.)—Jackie Heller, diminutive night club singer, today possessed an uncontested divorce from his wife, Grace Heller, of New York.

He said his wife left him in November, 1931, mainly because she didn't like his singing.

Heller started his singing career in Pittsburgh as a protege of Joe Hiller, once operator of a song shop in Smithfield street and more recently owner of "The Show Boat."

When Heller left Pittsburgh for Chicago he was taken under the wing of Ben Bernie and launched upon a radio career.

GOLD REPEALER FAILS TO ALTER PARIS STAND

U. S. Export Trade Boom and European Losses Seen

BY WILLIAM PARKER
International News Service.

PARIS, May 27.—Rrance will remain a foreign debt defaulter despite the plans of the Roosevelt administration to abrogate the gold clause in public and private contracts.

This was the information given to International News Service in high government circles today despite dispatches from Washington indicating the gold clause abolition would automatically ease foreign debt payments.

French officials said they were unable to see how depreciation of American currency—expected as a natural concomitant to the gold abrogation—could affect Europe's debt payments.

It was stated frankly that there is no possibility of France making good her defaulted payment of December 15 last or of paying the installment that falls due June 15.

AMERICAN EXPORTS AIDED

Permanent or semi-permanent abandonment of the gold standard by the United States, it was said, may facilitate development of American exports to Europe and promote restoration of prosperity in the United States by reviving trade.

Payment of France's debt to the United States, it was pointed out, can be accomplished only by sending European goods to the United States. Passage of the gold abolition bill by Congress, French officials asserted, would automatically deal a sharp blow to European exports.

French officials reiterated that the debt problem was not one of dollars and cents but of "principle." One spokesman told International News Service:

"We are not bargaining with the United States. If the United States wants to collect the debts it can do it only by lowering tariff walls and permitting European goods to go to America."

ITALY PAYING IN PAPER

ROME, May 27.—(AP.)—Bankers said today that the government will pay $6,000,000 interest on the Morgan $100,000,000 loan with paper dollars instead of gold when it falls due next Thursday.

The American step to remove the gold clause from all obligations aroused only slight interest here. In reference to the permission to foreign debtors to pay in ordinary dollars, bankers asserted this was a welcome gesture in bringing a virtual reduction of 15 per cent, but if Italy finds herself unable to pay, 15 per cent makes little more impression than no reduction at all.

COYNE FREED IN SLAYING

February 2, soon after the wedding.

On the witness stand young Coyne told of flying from Detroit to Pittsburgh after learning that his father was marrying a girl. He arrived after the ceremony.

After ordering the wedding party out of the house, young Coyne testified Michael S. Diskin, the best man, grappled with him. Coyne said he grabbed what he thought was a broomstick from behind the door. It was a 22-caliber rifle. It was discharged in the scuffle, he testified, and the young bride fell, a bullet through her heart.

FATHER NOT CALLED

After one commonwealth witness had changed her story as told previously to Assistant District Attorney B. Meredith Reid, the prosecution abandoned its plan to call several important witnesses and closed its case with the testimony of only two. Coyne's father was not called to testify.

Attorney Charles J. Margiotti, who prosecuted the Irene Shrader case, defended Coyne. Judge Norman T. Boose, of Somerset County, presided.

PECORA ATTACKS LIKE BULLDOG

By EDWIN C. HILL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—This man Pecora is a warrior from Warriorville. He's the Jack Dempsey of the legal prize ring.

His left jab is a thing of beauty and his right swing carries the kick of a Missouri mule.

And he needs all the punch that the Lord has given him, for he is battling not only the most powerful banking house in the world, but a clique of United States Senators of the very committee which is investigating that banking house—a clique which has displayed a touching and tender solicitude for the repute of the institution and the feelings of its members.

PERILED BY 'BULLDOG'

Prophecy is a chancey thing, especially in these days when the world is boiling with change, political, economic and social, but this much may be ventured: If ever the great house of Morgan loses its grip on the utilities of America and the finance of America, its members will be murmuring in their anger and chagrin the name of this Italian-born son of an immigrant, this gentleman with the bulldog tendency to get his teeth into the throat of something and hold on, come hell or high water.

In the language of his fathers the surname of Ferdinand Pecora, counsel at the bargain rate of $255 a month for the United States Senate committee on banking and currency, whose present task is an inquisition into the private bank of J. P. Morgan & Co., means "lamb."

But never in your life would you behold a more truculent, a more combative, a more persistent and war-like lamb. If lambs are like that in Italy, what must the wolves be like?

'FIGHTING LAMB'

When you think of his name translated into "lamb" and then look at that fighting face, with its brooding eyes, glowing with cold anger, and at the jutting jaw, rocklike in its unshakeable purpose, you want to smile, the contrast is so utterly absurd.

For the man is a bulldog, and has the look of one in the ensemble of his dark face, the face undershot with that curiously rigid, holding jaw.

Watch him as he takes his seat, in his place as counsel of the committee, at one end of the long mahogany table around which the grave and reverend Senators drape themselves according to their natural dignity and grace.

Plain as a pike-staff is the first impression and the absolutely correct one—that he comes not to parley or to jest but to raise hell!

He is not there for his amusement or for the diversion of others, even the lordly Senators and the Olympian Morgan. He is there to make trouble in large scaly bunches.

He prefers to make it for the Overman of Wall Street and his multitude of counsellors—for the pious and pontifical John W. Davis of the beautiful snow-white hair and the pink and white complexion that any girl would trade her hope of Heaven for; the cold and contemptuous Whitney; the grim and unsmiling Tom Lamont; for the whole kit and biling of the House of Morgan.

But there is a look in his eyes, as it ranges coldly around the long table, resting first upon one Senator and then another, which says as plain as words:

"If you boys want to go to the mat today, why just start something, that's all, and I don't give a cuss if you are a Senator!"

And if an interruption comes, as so frequently it does come, from some senator who interposes his sacred and venerable person between the fangs of Pecora and the imperilled hide of a Morgan partner, Pecora sits back, with eyes lifted to the ceiling, eyes which fairly shout:

"Oh, Lord, how long!"

And if the Senators babble off into a sideroad which usually reveals their perfectly phenomenal unacquaintance with the procedure of banking, Pecora's chill and sarcastic smile flits about the room.

"Against stupidity the very gods contend in vain!" . . .

BACK TO TOPIC

And when the interruption is over and he is free to proceed again with his line of questioning, he returns, like the human bulldog that he is, to the precise topic he had previously been chewing up.

The interruption may last a minute, or 10 minutes or half an hour. It makes no difference. The Bulldog takes hold again in the same old spot and begins to worry the anguished victim.

One must suppose, watching him hour after hour and day after day, that his main perplexity must be:

"How can these Senators waste so much valuable time in idle chat, leading nowhere?"

And when, in this idle chat, into which the great Mr. Morgan is sometimes drawn by this Senator or that, and bursts of laughter ring out across the table, Pecora's face sets like stone. It is obvious that he does not think it seemly for these investigators, Senators though they be, to be exchanging quips with the very gentleman they are supposed to be hauling over the coals.

It's a perfect cinch that if Pecora were not hampered by the flock of senators who surround him and crowd him and cramp his style, who display, some of them, an amusing awe of Morgan and a pained aversion to seeing Morgan's feelings trifled with, that he would clean up his job in jig time, for he's a rapid worker when his senatorial bosses don't hobble him.

SEEK TO SETTLE P. O. STRIKE

Miss Emmelinne Pitt, commissioner for the United States Department of Labor, is conferring with contractors and labor officials to effect a settlement of a strike at the new postoffice.

According to Robert Greenfield, construction engineer in charge, about 100 ironworkers and elevator constructors walked out yesterday when the Alson Company, of Chicago, a sub-contractor, gave work to millwrights connected with the carpenters' union. The ironworkers, whose wages are higher, contend the work should be awarded to members of their group.

Greenfield said general construction work had not been affected and expected the dispute to be settled next week.

SIX OF MORGAN PARTNERS OWE FIRM

Counsel Gives Names To Investigating Committee

John W. Davis, the attorney for the Morgan firm.

For the public this news added just one more detail to the inside information on the House of Morgan revealed this week for the first time in four long and sensational days of hearings, with J. P. Morgan and several of his partners under relentless questioning by the members of the Senate Banking Committee and their counsel, Ferdinand Pecora.

Given a breathing spell until next Wednesday, committee investigators began intensive preparation for further disclosure of long-hidden Morgan secrets, but whether they would be permitted to complete their work depended upon the outcome of a dispute raging within the committee and upon the will of the Senate.

A controversy over the course of the inquiry bubbled to the surface yesterday when Senator Glass (Dem.), of Virginia, heatedly demanded that Ferdinand Pecora, the counsel, inform the committee where he was headed.

Spectators burst into applause as Pecora defended his activities and other Senators quickly came to his support. But the issue still was to be decided by the committee and the Senate.

The Senate comes in because the committee will soon need more money. An appropriation of $20,000 was voted yesterday, but it will only last a short while. Pecora has asked $75,000 to carry the work through the summer recess.

MYSTERY DISSIPATED

Whatever the final decision, however, much of the mystery which has surrounded the Morgan house since its formation has been dissipated.

Before the uproar broke yesterday, Pecora brought out that the Morgan firm has an interest in utility companies supplying almost a quarter of the nation's gas and electricity, and covering a territory inhabited by more than 50,000,000 people.

He also showed that in forming the United Corporation, through which it reaches into the utility companies, the Morgan firm obtained 1,000,000 options for common stock in the holding company at $30 below their price less than a month later.

The United Corporation, which maintains its office in the Morgan headquarters, was shown to have an interest in a dozen large holding and operating companies in as many eastern states.

MITCHELL TRIAL ON THIRD COUNT

NEW YORK, May 27.—(AP.)—The third and last count on which Charles E. Mitchell is accused of defrauding the government of $850,428 income taxes in 1929 and 1930 was reached by the prosecution in Federal Court yesterday.

It concerns a payment to the former National City Bank chairman of $666,666.67 from the management fund of the National City Company which Mitchell admittedly did not enter on his income tax return.

The government contends it was income and subject to tax. The defense insists it was an advance against expected profits, to be repaid if they failed to materialize. The profits were not realized, but the government says Mitchell has not paid back the money.

Martin Booms Vare For Party Committee

PHILADELPHIA, May 27.—(AP.)—A movement has been launched for the election of William S. Vare to the Republican National Committee from Pennsylvania by the "round robin" method.

Edward Martin, state Republican chairman, started the indorsement on its way yesterday with requests to members of the state committee to sign their names.

skilled lawyers, primed in the loop-holes of the law and knowing where its secret exits lie.

NO FIELD agent's memorandum, waiving verification, accompanies his honestly compiled return. The revenue department's agent pounces on him like a hawk, demanding production of all his books and vouchers. For days and perhaps weeks he is under the harrow of taunts, unconcealed skepticism and insulting interrogation.

There is no presumption, as with the Morgan returns, of his good faith. He finds all the experience and ingenuity of the government arrayed against him. He is accused of duplicities of which he never dreamed himself capable and which often he cannot even comprehend.

He finds the burden of proof is upon him to demonstrate his honesty against the unsupported insinuations of the government agents.

If he is fortunate enough to emerge vindicated from this trial, there is no apology or redress offered him by the government. He is blithely told that the government has only done its duty in trying to get the utmost possible out of him, and is reminded that the law puts upon the taxpayer the burden of outplaying the government at its shady game of legalized shake-down and extortion.

THIS IS nothing short of a racket and a most disgraceful one, as William Randolph Hearst pointed out on March 13, 1932, in directing all his newspapers to conduct a sustained crusade against the federal income tax. Mr. Hearst said:

"The income tax system has become the greatest racket in the United States and the government the biggest racketeer.

"The system is in itself unjust, inequitable and un-American. It paralyses enterprise and penalizes honesty.

"When the Democratic party has the sincerity to be democratic, when it has the patriotism to be American, it will substitute excise taxation and sales taxation for undemocratic, un-American discriminatory income taxation with its crooked evasion and equally crooked enforcement."

The whole income tax system should be abolished. It is dishonest through and through. It robs the poor man and exempts the rich man. It lifts the burden of supporting the government from the shoulders of the strong and powerful and puts it on the backs of those least able to sustain it.

From the standpoint of public morals this is monstrous!

A government that tolerates such a condition or is insensible to such injustice has betrayed its trust. It is not worthy of the people's confidence nor will it long enjoy it.

THE OBVIOUS duty of Congress is to have done with the exploded fallacy that the government can be run on the dwindling returns of an iniquity like the income tax. Let the growing popular demand for sensible tax legislation be heeded by Congress.

The people understand that the government needs revenue. They want taxes that are not silly, but productive. The public opposition to the sales tax is fast disappearing. It is primarily due to a lack of popular understanding of its nature and operation.

The people now realize that such a tax is automatic, relatively painless, equitable, and even considerate of the individual purse because of its wide distribution.

They are willing to accept a tax that is shown to have worked well where it has been tried.

They are sick of the income tax which has all the vices of the worst of taxes—and, in addition, is an UTTER FIASCO AS A PRODUCER OF NEEDED REVENUE.

Pinchot Journeys Home for Holiday

HARRISBURG, May 27.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot yesterday made a large slash in the pile of bills on his desk and motored to his home at Milford for the Memorial Day holiday.

The Governor signed 45 bills and vetoed 24. This leaves 405 on which he must act by June 5. He will return here Wednesday.

The grocery store Councilman William Soost once conducted at 515 Collins avenue was entered by thieves early today and a cash register stolen, according to Harry Soost, a brother.

STATE RELIEF BILL SIGNED

HARRISBURG, May 27.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot yesterday completed the state's unemployment relief program by signing the Scott (Center) bill appropriating $20,000,000 of the proposed $25,000,000 bond issue for aiding those out of work.

He already has approved bills making direct grants of $25,000,000 for the jobless. Yesterday's measure boosts the total to $45,000,000. The State Emergency Relief Board hopes the federal government will match this amount, thus providing $90,000,000 for jobless relief in the state in the period which began April 1.

The money will be spent as needed, and there is no time limit on it.

The remainder of the bond issue will go to hospitals and schools.

The voters in November will determine whether the bond issue shall be floated by the state.

U. S. THREATENS TO WITHDRAW PEACE PACT

Jap Hears Roosevelt Say Nations Must Disarm to Get Aid

By KINGSBURY SMITH
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—With the disarmament conference once again on the brink of failure, Europe today had a new warning from President Roosevelt that the American offer to co-operate with the rest ow the world in maintaining peace was dependent upon drastic reduction of armaments.

The President made it clear at his semi-weekly press conference that there would be no American pledges "to consult" or to abandon any "neutrality rights" if the disarmament conference fails.

The whole purpose of the American offer, the President said, was to pave the way for drastic reduction of world armaments. If the disarmament conference does not accomplish something, this government sees no reason why it should go on with that offer, the President added.

This warning was made by the President in the presence of Viscount Ishii, head of the Japanese delegation to the economic and disarmament conversations here.

Although the President made his statement in response to questions, the presence of Viscount Ishii was significant in view of the fact that Japan's demands for increased naval strength is one of the principal obstacles that has placed the disarmament conference on the rocks.

The Japanese have demanded an increase in naval strength that would give them virtual parity with the United States and Great Britain.

Hitler Demands Return Of Polish Corridor

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT
International News Service.

PARIS, May 27.—Chancellor Adolf Hitler has made return of the Polish Corridor to the Reich the price of effective German cooperation at the disarmament conference, it was learned today with revelations the Corridor is the center of under-cover negotiations between Berlin, Paris and Warsaw.

Arguing that reunion of East Prussia with Germany is inevitable as the eventual price of peace between the Reich and other continental nations, Hitler has stressed through his ambassadors that the Corridor, long a bone of German-Polish contention, is the prime foreign interest of the Nazis.

put men in all walks of life under obligations. This is the money power in action."

BALDRIGE UNMENTIONED

The Governor did not mention the name of Judge Thomas J. Baldrige, a member of the State Superior Court, who also was listed as a "preferred" client of the Morgan affiliates. He did, however, include the name of a former Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, Robert von Moschzisker.

The Governor added:

"Under the lid are three justices of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania being offered, and at least two of them accepting, while they were on the bench, inside favors worth large sums of money from the greatest public utility bankers in America.

"According to the accounts in the papers, these three justices are Robert von Moschzisker, John W. Kephart and William I. Schaffer. Von Moschzisker is no longer on the court. Kephart and Schaffer are. According to the papers, Kephart and Schaffer admit taking the favors."

Gov. Pinchot characterized their actions as "utterly confidence destroying, wrong, and without excuse."

"The acceptance of favors from any interest that is certain to have cases before him is utterly indefensible for any judge. It is worst of all for justices of the Supreme Court—the court which has the last word.

"Judge who take favors from interests which are certain to have cases before them have utterly disqualified themselves. There is but one proper step for them to take, and that is to resign."

Glass Asks 'Fair Deal' For Morgan at Quiz

WASHINGTON, May 27.—(AP.)—Senator Carter Glass (Dem.), of Virginia, wants the Senate committee investigation of J. P. Morgan & Co. to continue, but says:

"I'm still against making it a three-ring circus."

Citing the Senate's passage of the Glass banking bill, which would affect the Morgan firm by providing for the separation of commercial and investment banking, Senator Glass said:

"I'm not a partisan of the House of Morgan, but I've got enough courage to see that they are done justice, whether I'm taking the popular side or not. I'd do it for anybody.

"We've got nothing that will enable constructive legislation thus far. There have been incriminatory implications from much of the testimony. I resent that—whether the man is rich or poor."

Ford Awarded Verdict In Wayside Inn Suit

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 27.—(AP.)—A Federal Court jury at 2 a. m. today returned a verdict for Henry Ford, Detroit automobile manufacturer, in the $100,000 suit brought against him by Herbert K. Allard, of Cranston.

The jury deliberated 12 hours.

Allard brought suit to obtain $49,844.70 which he alleged Ford owed him for commissions in negotiations which resulted in purchase of the Wayside Inn and neighboring properties in Sudbury Mass. for Ford.

Allard maintained he had been directed by Ford to conduct the negotiations and had been promised a commission. Ford stated in his deposition that he met Allard only once, three or four years prior to the beginning of the negotiations in 1923.

NEW EXPOSE OF VICE PROMISED BY CRUSADING PASTOR

FOE OF RACKET HITS 'BLIND' OFFICIALS

North Sider Aroused By Bombing Plot Pushes Reform

Another expose of vice conditions which he asserts are "rampant in Pittsburgh" was promised today by the Rev. R. E. Snodgrass, militant pastor of the First Christian Church, Arch street and Montgomery avenue, North Side. Mr. Snodgrass renewed his campaign against vice following an alleged attempt to bomb the Second United Presbyterian Church, North Side.

Mr. Snodgrass

The promise contained a veiled hint that vice exists with the knowledge of police.

The expose will be made tomorrow evening during the pastor's sermon on "Pittsburgh and the Scarlet Sin."

Mr. Snodgrass said he will discuss the questions:

"How has Pittsburgh been dealing with the sin of immorality?"

"What steps can be taken and should be taken to solve this age-old problem."

The pastor declared:

"I intend to speak candidly on conditions as I find them here and upon what I believe have been some fatal neglects. It must be known even in official circles that vice is organized and commercialized here.

"Laxity of enforcement, neglect of the pulpit to speak out, and lessoning of home restraints are contributing causes to this situation. In view of conditions as some of us see them on the North Side, we must not be criticized too hastily for raising the question whether there are any moral standards left in Pittsburgh.

"Using the words of our Superintendent of Police, I intend to speak of the matter of 'breaking faith' Sunday night. And by the way, I will make clear that I have not broken faith either with a 'committee' or with Mr. McQuaide."

TWO OFFICERS, BANDIT SLAIN

SOUTH BEND, May 27.—(AP.)—A filling station bandit suspect who killed two policemen and wounded another in two gun battles near the city's business district died from shotgun wounds early today. He was not identified.

The officers slain were Patrolmen Delbert Thompson, 42, shot during a hand-to-hand struggle, and Charles Farkas, 38. Patrolman D. A. Martin, who with Farkas encountered the suspect after Thompson's slaying, was wounded in the shoulder before firing two shotgun charges that felled the killer.

Thomaso Stanlos, a gypsy, who, police said, admitted he was a companion of the suspect, professed not to know the slain man's name. Thomaso was captured by Steve Gyenge, a passer-by, after Patrolman Thompson had been slain and the killer fled through an alley.

Patrolmen Farkas and Martin came upon the slayer 15 blocks from the scene of the shooting, attempting to hail motorists for a ride.

Youth Slain, One Held in Shooting

WASHINGTON, Pa., May 27.—Clarence Porterfield, 22, of Rogers Mills, was lodged in the county jail last night charged with murder in the slaying yesterday of Carl Cavanaugh, 19, of Normalville, in a Charleroi rooming house.

Porterfield, police said, at first declared Cavanaugh shot himself but later admitted that he shot Cavanaugh accidentally while examining a revolver.

What Are You Going to Do About It?

Crime syndicates, those organized gangs of hi-jackers, extortionists, business-wreckers, maimers and murderers, could not exist long in any American community unless there was perfected a working alliance between the underworld and certain base public servants charged with preserving the peace and protecting property, life and liberty of the citizenry.

That they do exist in virtually every section of the land is mute evidence that such a working alliance is in existence.

And they will continue to exist, to wax rich, to grow stronger and bolder in their depredations, until that alliance is shattered.

To break that alliance calls for the concentrated effort of all law-enforcement agencies, federal, state and municipal, and YOU, MR. AND MRS. TAXPAYER.

Most public officials are honest, faithful, conscientous public servants; most police and enforcement officials are a great credit to their departments.

It is the base officials and the recreant policemen who make possible the alliance with the wolves of the underworld.

It is due to these few base public servants bringing discredit upon their calling that racketeering flourishes.

It is these recreant public servants who must be routed if racketeers are to be doomed in this country.

WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO ABOUT IT?

ARGUE MUNHALL POISON CASE

Arguments to exhume the body which figured in the Munhall poisoning case were made yesterday by Attorney Louis Little, representing Mrs. Mary Chalfa and Mrs. Anna Allas, found guilty of first degree murder in connection with the death of Steve Allas.

Judge J. Frank Graff, who presided at the trial, sat with Judges Samuel E. Gardner and W. Heber Dithrich.

Little contended the chemical examination made by the chemist, F. C. Buckmaster, was not complete and reliable. Buckmaster testified at the trial to finding salts of tin in the exhumed body of the victim.

A new trial was also asked by Little on the ground that the court erred in admitting evidence regarding the deaths of three other persons.

Girl Guilty in Rum Case, Mercy Urged

James P. Martorella, wholesale beverage dealer at 1201 Wylie avenue, was convicted yesterday in Federal Court of sale and possession of alcohol.

Miss Naomie A. Johns, 23, a co-defendant, was convicted on one count of the indictment, charging sale of a gallon of alcohol. The jury recommended extreme mercy for her.

Secret Course Mapped By Racket Foes

The Better Business Bureau today was proceeding on a mysterious course mapped out for it at a meeting of its board of directors yesterday.

Whether that course was in submission to racketeers who have attempted to intimidate the bureau or whether it was in intensive opposition to the racketeers was unknown today.

Meeting in the Keystone Athletic Club, 12 strong, they discussed for nearly two hours their plans to rid the city of business racketeers.

At least eight of the 12 members meeting—there are 17 in all—had received threatening letters demanding their resignation from the board following activities of the bureau's employes against charity and bankruptcy racketeers.

Their meeting yesterday had been heralded as a pow-wow to chart a course of action against the racket men. It had been freely predicted that a ringing denunciation of their threateners would be issued.

No denunciation was issued. Capt. Rouel W. Elton, manager of the bureau, said there was "nothing to tell."

But he inferred there was no substantial change in policies of the bureau. Some time ago these policies were announced to be in violent opposition to racketeers preying on business.

Actual conclusions of the meeting, however, remained secret. Some thought they might include a secret, silent struggle against racketeers such as the so-called "Forty Thieves," bankruptcy ring here.

A policy of meeting fire with fire through secret, strong-arm methods was suggested in some quarters.

Meanwhile, an underworld that has demonstrated its willingness to use violence to combat reform and cleanup efforts was in suspense today as it awaited a declaration of policy.

'PRESBYTERIAN' DROPPED BY ASSEMBLY

Church Paper Aid Cut Off After Stormy Argument

COLUMBUS, O., May 27.—(AP.)—Against stormy opposition, the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., voted yesterday to discontinue publication of the Presbyterian, official magazine of the church.

Then, as a further economy step, the assembly approved appointment of a committee to study "the field of operations of the Board of National Missions and Christian Education."

Both moves came on the recommendation of the general council.

Also on recommendation of committee, the assembly approved a proposal to defer consideration of the plan of union with the United Presbyterian Church of North America. A joint committee of the two groups will continue its work on the plan.

The recommendation to discontinue the Presbyterian magazine was hailed by its proponents as a necessary step to save $12,000, but branded by others as a move which would "muzzle the mouthpiece" of the church boards, and brought the stormiest scene of this assembly.

Leading the attack on the proposal, the Rev. Alvin B. Gurley, of Philadelphia, declared the magazine was needed especially because of the repeated attacks of such church magazines as "Christianity Today, organ of the extreme fundamentalist group.

A new chapter in the church law was declared adopted, supplanting the old chapter on the marriage ceremony.

Chief among the recommendations is one that pastors be given three days' notice by couples intending to be married.

TORTURE CASES TO BE PUSHED

Cruel treatment of Juvenile Court wards in foster homes will result in prosecution of those responsible, Judge Benjamin Lencher, of County Court, has decided. He will hold a conference Wednesday with District Attorney A. T. Park as to the method of procedure.

This step resulted from revelations of alleged mistreatment of Juvenile Court wards, made by Leo Riordan, chief county investigator. In one instance a 3-year-old girl was said to have been chained to a bedpost because she couldn't memorize the Lord's prayer.

ACADEMY HEAD LEAPS TO DEATH

PHILADELPHIA, May 27.—(AP.)—Col. Thomas H. Russell, president of the Staunton Military Academy, of Staunton, Va., plunged to his death yesterday from the window of a hospital where he had been under treatment for a nervous ailment.

Col. Russell was a widely-known educator. His wife was the daughter of the founder of the Staunton Academy.

LAWYER FREED IN ASSETS CASE

Councilman Lawrence V. Fry, of Monongahela, Attorney Homer T. Gaut and John A. Neylon yesterday went on trial before Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker on a charge of concealing assets of the bankrupt Monongahela Coal and Supply Company, of which they were officers.

After the government closed its case, Judge Schoonmaker announced he would grant a directed acquittal for Attorney Gaut.

Many character witnesses testified for the attorney, among them Judge J. Boyd Crumrine and W. R. Dennison, referee in bankruptcy, of Washington County.

STRIKERS QUIET IN GREENSBURG

GREENSBURG, Pa., May 27.—The strike of 350 workers of the Greensburg Garment Company, alleging sweatshop working conditions, entered its second day today without disorder. A few pickets were in evidence, but they had little to do.

D. G. Keller, general manager, together with two or three officials of the company, were the only persons in the factory, its wheels silenced by the strike yesterday as production was started on 10,000 women's dresses. Keller said:

"I don't intend to hire anyone to take the place of the strikers. And I can't meet their conditions. The wholesale price is too low."

'Bugs' Plays Safe By Reversing Call to Capital

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

NOVA SCOTIA: We consider this a safe distance from the District of Columbia.

Having been ordered to Washington we fled in the other direction.

Looks like we are in for some musical resignations and melodious farewells.

We indorse the sentiments of our special envoy to the Court of St. Jinx in Geneva. Rather than resign under fire we will continue to sizzle in the pan.

Just rub a little butter in back our ears and we fry very well.

We will give you the latest Wall Street quotations:

Two favors for every office. Two reciprocations for every favor.

We are continuing on to the icy north where you can bribe a man with a frozen herring.

We just got a good look at that preferred list.

BEAVER MISSION DOCTOR BACK

NEW YORK, May 27.—(AP.)—Dr. Joseph S. Maxwell, medical missionary who has been in Western Abyssinia for four years, returned yesterday on the liner Hamburg to spened a leaeve at his former home in Beaver, Pa.

Dr. Maxwell said he was stationed in an outlying district where there was a native village of about 2,000 inhabitants and only two other white persons besides his own family.

When he first went there, he said, the district was full of witch doctors, but the white man's medicine has so impressed the natives that only one witch doctor remains who has any extensive clientele.

Accompanying him were Mrs. Maxwell and their four children.

SEWICKLEY MAN ASKS DIVORCE

Alfred C. Trudel, 440 Centennial avenue, Sewickley, has filed a divorce suit against Mrs. Beatrice P. Trudel, Montreal, Canada. Trudel charges desertion. They were married March 6, 1928, and separated June 20 the same year.

Divorces were granted yesterday to Earl C. Calwell from Frances E. Calwell, Lucy B. Von Devender from William Lee Von Devender, Henry F. Egle from Ethel R. Egle, Rosalie Bollenbacher from Matt J. Bollenbacher, Katherine Beaumont from Charles V. Beaumont, Lena Jampetro from Albert Jampetro, Josephine La Canna from Joseph La Canna, James W. Hollis from Mary Hollis, John Latoza from Frances Latoza, Mary Shellenberger from John M. Shellenberger and John D. Reilly from Coletta M. Reilly.

Divorce suits were filed by Helen J. Otis against Laurence E. Otis, Elva G. Taylor against Olan Taylor, Marie Cervas against Charles Cervas, Emmy Knoess against Otto K. Knoess, May N. Brunetti against John Brunetti, and by Jennie R. McCausland against John R. McCausland.

WAGES RAISED BY PITTSBURGH COAL CO.

8,000 Miners Affected By Increase Due To Business Gain

The Pittsburgh Coal Company today announced a 10 per cent increase in wages, effective immediately.

It is the first upward revision in the company's wages since 1926.

Eight thousand miners, employed in 12 of the company's mines in Allegheny, Westmoreland, Washington and Fayette counties, and in one of its Kentucky mines, will be affected.

Leaders, who have been receiving from 35 to 46 cents a ton, will receive 38½ to 49½ cents under the new scale. Men working for a daily wage will receive $3.80. This compares with the $7.80 base rate paid under the Jacksonville agreement with the United Mine Workers of America, which the company abrogated in 1927.

BUSINESS GAIN CITED

J. D. A. Morrow, president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, said the new wages were in excess of the union scale; but he said that the union probably would dispute the statement.

The increase was made possible, he said, by a marked improvement in business. In March and April the company's production was about 22,000 tons a day, or 55 per cent of capacity. That was the lowest point of the depression. In the last two weeks there has arisen a demand for industrial coal which has stepped up production to 30,000, or 65 per cent of capacity.

CHARGES WIFE SPENT INCOME

Financial troubles were largely the cause of their separation, Assistant District Attorney Charles B. Jarrett indicated yesterday to Judge Thomas M. Marshall, in asking a divorce from Mrs. Marjorie W. Jarrett. He also declared his wife called him names.

Mrs. Jarrett was Miss Marjorie Belle Williams, daughter of Homer D. Williams, president of the Pittsburgh Steel Company.

Jarrett, who lives at 2205 Beechwood boulevard, said that while his salary was $5,000 a year, his wife contracted bills totaling $10,000.

He called as a witness their maid, who testified most of the care of the children was left to her as Mrs. Jarrett was away much of the time. The couple separated in January and Mrs. Jarrett is now in St. Petersburg, Fla.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

NEW YORK, May 27.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Funny thing about this so-called preferred list that the Morgan Company put out. All of 'em held the stock too long and it died on their hands, so it was really a "sucker list."

New York City collected a million dollars yesterday just for beer licenses alone. A state to remain dry nowadays not only has to have will power, but it has to find some mysterious way of getting in some dough. Maybe a state sales tax on everybody, will keep it off the beer drinkers.

Business Gain Reduces Relief List in City

A slight decrease in the number of families receiving relief was shown last week by the Family Welfare Association. It was the first reduction since the week of September 5, 1932. In the county the load was still mounting, although the rate of increase had slowed.

Improved business conditions and the return of warm weather are believed to be the reasons for the decrease of relief cases. During the same period last year a heavy increase in both city and county cases was recorded.

The need for shoes and clothing is still acute and presents a critical problem to the family agencies. The Family Welfare Association, for the past week, spent $74,399.20 for food relief to city families and $124,629.06 for county families.

CHURCHES TO PAY TRIBUTE TO WAR DEAD OF NATION

VETERAN POSTS TO ATTEND SERVICES

Pittsburgh churches will observe Memorial Day tomorrow. Members of the George A. Custer Post, G. A. R. and George E. Walter's Post, American Legion, will meet in annual assembly in the Grace Methodist Protestant Church, Sharpsburg, at 11 a. m. tomorrow. The Rev. O. W. The Story of Queen Esther -:- CHAPTER V -:- Told in Pictures by Dan Smith

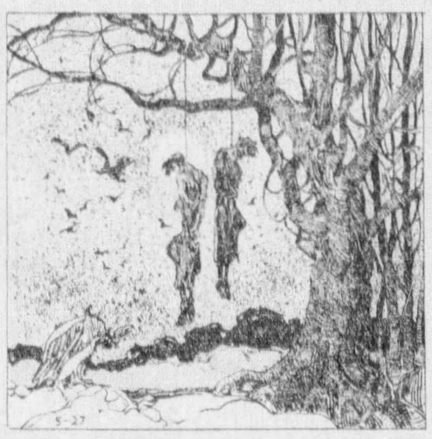
Queen Esther's poor uncle, Mordecai, a servant in the palace, overheard two chamberlains, Bigtham and Teresh, plotting against the safety of Xerxes.

Mordecai secretly told Esther that Bigtham and Teresh were scheming to kidnap King Xerxes, and she hurried to her lord and informed him of the plot.



Immediately the King had the plotters hanged to a tree. But Mordecai had an enemy, Haman, high in the King's favor and chief captain of his armies.

Haman hated Mordecai because Mordecai alone among the people refused to bow when Haman rode into the court of the palace on his huge horse.

CHURCH GAINS IN CHINA

Missionary Visiting Here Says People More Receptive

Chinese people have never been so receptive to Christianity as they are today, according to John Magee, Episcopal missionary to Nanking, who will speak in the Calvary Episcopal Church, Shady avenue, at 11 a. m. tomorrow. At the home of his sister, Mrs. Vernon Scaife, at 5452 Aylesboro avenue, he said yesterday:

"Since the Japanese invasion, a wonderful change has come over the Chinese, in Nanking at least. Formerly China blamed her distress on 'foreign imperialism.' Now in public meetings she acknowledges an internal spiritual and moral weakness.

"Conversions are numerous today. Religious freedom is upheld and antagonism against Christianity much less marked than it has been in the last two decades."

Concerning Pearl S. Buck, resigned Presbyterian missionary and author, he said:

"'Good Earth' is a wonderful book. It is a real contribution to knowledge of Chinese farming people, who comprise most of the population. Her article in Harper's Weekly, however, was unfair and unbalanced. It did harm to our cause because I don't think it was a fair statement of the real situation."

Judge Will Speak In Church on Crime

Judge Benjamin Lencher of the County Court will speak on "The Cause, the Cost, the Cure of Crime" at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the Mt. Washington Methodist Episcopal Church, Sycamore street.

THIEL HONORS REV. SWOYER

The Rev. Grover E. Swoyer, of Mount Zion Lutheran Church, Perrysville avenue, North Side, has been chosen commencement speaker at Thiel College, Greenville, Pa., June 2 to 7.

On the board of trustees of this college of the Pittsburgh Synod of the United Lutheran Church in America, are these Pittsburghers: the Rev. Dr. George W. Englar, president; the Rev. Dr. A. J. Holl, the Rev. Henry H. Bagger, the Rev. Jacob F. Scholl, the Rev. A. W. Steinfurth, Miss Eleanor Denmler and Charles H. Lehman.

Chofetz Chaim Men Sponsoring Benefit

Final arrangements have been made for a movie benefit to be given by the Men's Club of the Congregation Chofetz Chaim tomorrow at 8 p. m. in Liberty Theater. Samuel Maryn, chairman, is being assisted by Louis Ruttenberg, Nathan Katzen, I. J. Ruderman, Harry Beeson, Morris Markowits and J. Benkovitz.

Chartiers Templars To Attend Church

Ascension Day services of Chartiers Commandery No. 78 will be held tomorrow evening in the Episcopal Church of the Nativity, Crafton. The Rev. Harry A. Price, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, will preach the sermon.

Members of the commandery will march as a uniformed body from the Craft Club, in Crafton avenue, to the church. The service will be a union meeting.

Pastor Ordained In His Home Church

In his home church, Trinity Lutheran, of Latrobe, Samuel H. Gross was ordained to the Lutheran ministry by the president and missionary superintendent of the Synod, the Rev. Henry H. Bagger, and the Rev. Dr. John J. Myers, assisted by the Rev. John B. Gardner, pastor. The Rev. Gross was graduated from Thiel College, in 1927, and Philadelphia Theological Seminary in 1932. He will be pastor of the United Lutheran Church, of Tarentum.

"POTIPHAR'S WIFE" ..... Temptation
7:40 P. M.—Organ Recital by John A. Bell.

Love and Luxury
were dearer to her than loyalty!
This drama is not of imaginary people. Flesh-and-blood characters live on the screen in this powerful story. The wife who could not make sacrifices. The old employee whose courage fired the souls of those who would give up hope. We sincerely believe that the gripping humanity of this great picture will win your cheers...tears... and whole-hearted applause!

10 DAYS GIVEN FOR 'WINGS' ANSWERS

Contest Rules

The rules of the "Win Your Wings" contest follow:

The Sun-Telegraph has published in 12 installments the serial "Win Your Wings," the experiences of a student pilot. Three questions relative to aviation subjects were printed each day, the answers to each being contained in some previous installment.

Thirty-six questions must be answered. When your list of questions and answers is complete, send them to the "Win Your Wings" Contest Editor, Sun-Telegraph, Telegraph Square, Pittsburgh, together with an essay of not more than 250 words on "Why I Want to Fly."

Questions and answers must be accompanied by essay.

TEN PRIZES

Winners will be selected as to largest number of correct answers and merit of essay. In case of ties duplicate awards will be given.

First prize—Choice of a pilot's course at the Penn School or a round trip to Chicago, good for 60 days.

Second—Choice of a mechanic's course and full apprenticeship or two round trip flights to Washington, D. C., good for 60 days.

Third—Pilot's ground course or one round trip flight to Washington.

Fifth—Round trip to Cleveland.

Sixth to tenth prizes, inclusive—Round trip flights to Akron.

Winners of first, second, third and fourth prizes will be subject to United States Department of Commerce regulations governing aviation students. To be eligible for a pilot's course, student must be 16 years of age or over, and, if a minor, must have parents' written consent to fly. Passenger flights to various cities as designated are optional.

Here are the last three questions in the "Win Your Wings Contest:"

34—What flying maneuvers are required of a student pilot for a solo license?

35—Who conducts examinations and issues pilot's license?

36—How close to the landing mark is the student required to bring his ship in a pilot's test?

With the publication of these questions, the Sun-Telegraph "Win Your Wings" contest ends. You have 10 days in which to complete your answers and an essay of not more than 250 words on "Why I Want to Fly."

Essay and answers must be mailed or brought to the Sun-Telegraph "Win Your Wings Contest" editor before midnight, June 6. No entries will be received after that date.

Write your name on the contest blank appearing in these columns today. Send it in with your answers and essay.

Minors eligible for flying instruction must accompany entries with parents' written consent. Children unler 16 years of age are not eligible for instruction, but may choose one of the flying trips if selected by the judges as a winner.

For the convenience of those who have followed the contest, but have misplaced or lost questions, the entire list of 36 questions will be reprinted in Sunday's Sun-Telegraph, together with the official entry blank.

This is the last time the entry blank will be published. Be sure to get your copy of Sunday's paper.

'Puzzled Destinies' On 3 Stations

"Puzzled Destinies," American Weekly dramatization revealing a desperate effort oy a young clergyman's wife to break her husband's infatuation for a pretty blonde by taking her into their home, is presented today on WCAE at 7:45 p. m.; WWVA, Wheeling, W. Va., at 5:45 p. m., and WMMN, Fairmont, W. Va., at 6:45 p. m.

The play, introducing an entirely new technique in the adaptation of the "stream of consciousness" method to radio presentation, is based on an article published in tomorrow's issue of the big feature magazine, distributed each Sunday with the Sun-Telegraph.

Author Tells Why 'No Nice Girl Swears'

More than an hour of tonight's radio time on combined NBC and CBS coast-to-coast hookups, with WCAE, KDKA and WJAS joining locally, is devoted to the Century of Progress exposition's opening night, beginning at 9:15 p. m.

Arcturus puts on its much-heralded performance—if all goes well—to switch on the fair's lighting system with a beam of light that left the star, 240 trillion miles away, at the time of the World's Columbian Exposition in Chicago 40 years ago. Four separate observatories, including that of the University of Pittsburgh, will be linked for the stunt.

The major portion of the broadcast, to continue until 10:30 p. m., is musical, featuring Lawrence Tibbett; the Chicago Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Dr. Frederick Stock, and a chorus of 2,000 voices.

Mr. Tibbett

Preceding the event, on WCAE at 7:15 is a descriptive talk by Burton Holmes, famed globe-trotter, on the day's highlights, while a follow-up, on the same station at 11:30 p. m., is a Yankee version of the Quatre Arts, the famous Parisian artists' ball, broadcast direct from "The Streets of Paris" on the fair grounds. Headlining the show are Wally Colbath, former National A. A. U. diving champion and a member of the 1932 Olympic team; Jane Fauntz, breast stroke champion, and Frank Snary and Fred Springer, comedy outfit.

DEBS CONDUCT

Social conduct befitting a debutante in this year of grace is the unusaul subject treated during "America's Grub Street Speaks" on WJAS at 6. The speaker is Alice Leone Moats, socialite author of "No Nice Girl Swears," being published in the City Life section of the Sun-Telegraph, beginning tomorrow.

Miss Moats

"The Federal Octopus," with Sterling E. Edmunds, constitutional lawyer, as guest speaker, is the topic of the weekly American Taxpayers League broadcast on KDKA at 7.

The same station at 8 carries an address by A. Lincoln Filene, on "The Businessman's Stake in Education," concluding the series sponsored by the Joint Commission on Emergency in Education.

Globe-Trotter's Time Revised

Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, broadcasts on a revised schedule today, going on the air over WCAE only at 10:45 a. m., 2:30 p. m. and 6:30 p. m.

His regular schedule, interrupted to accommodate network broadcasts on both WCAE and WJAS from the Century of Progress exposition, and a special WCAE morning program, will be resumed Monday.

COX RADIO TALK ON PRESIDENT

In his radio talk from the pulpit of Old St. Patrick's Church yesterday, Father Cox told the inside story of his recent visit to the White House and interview with President Roosevelt. He spoke of the cheerful, bustling atmosphere surrounding the President, the cordial greeting and the friendly contact he enjoyed compared with the reception a former President gave him when he headed the trek of the unemployed to Washington something over a year ago.

In an intimate sidelight of the visit he told of an incident in which a secretary came in during the interview and announced that a foreign envoy was waiting. The President did not let this fact disturb his chat with the "father of the jobless."

Father Cox will get another good sized check today as his commissions in his drive for Sun-Telegraph subscriptions. Every subscription that comes in on the blank on this page or is telephoned in with the request that Father Cox be given credit for it brings to his unemployment relief fund a liberal cash commission.

Miss Davies' New Song Popular

By AIRCASTER

That new song, "Sweetheart Darlin," from Marion Davies' new picture, "Peg o' My Heart," current bill at the Penn Theater, has clicked as far as Pittsburgh Maestros are concerned. Boosters playing it nightly include Eddie Peyton, Jack Pettis, Rubinoff, Etzi, Covato, Dave Broudy and Joe Schaffer.

Eddie Peyton

Despite telegraphed protest from his sponsor, Dave Rubinoff insists he will be on the air from the Willows over WWSW tonight. The Pittsburgh maestro, whose week's billing at the Oakmont spot concludes tonight, interpreted the message as referring to Wednesday and Thursday nights — when his WWSW schedule called for competitive broadcasts against those of Fannie Brice and Rudy Vallee on WCAE—and so stayed off the air.

Music of the Air

The Anatole Club's Spring Cotillion at Webster Hall Monday night, with the Paradise Harbor Orchestra holding forth rhythmically, sets the pace for a whirlwind series of radio orchestra bookings to wind up with a three-day stopover at the Willows by Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians June 29 and 30 and July 1.

Jan Garber will play a one-night stand at Eddie Peyton's club, Steubenville pike, this Wednesday, and the Willows will feature George Olson June 8 and 9, and Isham Jones, June 16.

Monday night also will be marked by the opening of Johnny Johnson's Orchestra at the Willows for an indefinite stay. Tonight brings Tal Henry and his North Carolinians to Kennywood Park for a week's engagement.

Paul Gannon, Katherine Rickert and Ralph Federer have been signed for a daily except Sunday commercial series on WJAS beginning Wednesday at 6:45 p. m. . . . Another new sponsored series, opening on KDKA Monday at 5, spots the Rhythm Kings.

Ford Miller returns from a week's seashore vacation Monday . . . Leon Churchon, WCAE dramatic star, has turned announcer.

"The Voice of Israel," new Jewish musical program directed by J. N. Klaman, bows on WWSW tomorrow at 12:15.

Marjorie Stewart, of the Microphone Training School, Bayard street, is planning to add a children's course to the curriculum.

Globe-Trotting

—By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN—

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

Rubinoff endeared himself to the New Castle people last week while filling an engagement at a theater there.

With his bow poised to strike out the first notes from his famous violin, his attention was attracted to the balcony, where a young mother was doing her best to quiet an infant. In a moment the child's wail filled the house.

Rubinoff, free from unpleasant temperament, was equal to the occasion. With a broad benign smile, he stepped across the footlights on to the organ console, to get as close to the child as possible, and then with his face lifted, directed the strains of Rock-a-bye-baby toward the balcony. (Thanks Anne Herbert).

Enright manager, Frank Roberts, found himself perplexed recently after a special Saturday morning show for a kiddies club was presented at his theater. At the conclusion the youngsters showed no inclination to move. The manager felt that the current film attraction wasn't entirely suitable for child consumption. He couldn't ask them to go out and he couldn't close the house because the adult patrons for the afternoon show had started to stream in.

He solved his difficulty by calling up John Hooley, of the Sheridan Square, who readily agreed to continue the children's party at his playhouse.

Scotty, Wilkinsburg — Every minor child of naturalized parents is a citizen of the United States. If the parent is naturalized and his children are not here, they are made citizens automatically when they arrive, providing that at the time of such arrival they are still minors.

Regardless of the naturalization of the parent, every child born in this country is a citizen, unless the parent owes allegiance to a foreign government and is under foreign jurisdiction, i.e. ambassadors, delegates, etc.

If a parent dies after taking out first papers the widow or child upon reaching maturity can use the first papers as her or his own declaration of intention.

Another question was: "Is a child who came to this country with his parents at the age of 2 years, whose father died and mother subsequently remarried an American citizen, a citizen himself?"

The Winchester School students had a grand afternoon yesterday for their dog and flower show. The flower exhibits were arranged in the school gym, and the dog show was held, as usual, on the school grounds.

There were big and little dogs, frisky terriers, dignified Irish setters, appealing Scotties, snobbish Pekinese, and only one huge St. Bernard in the entire exhibit.

Cute Phyllis Holzell was there with her three-months-old wire-haired terrier which she calls "Skippy" and she confided that she hoped he'd win a prize.

Mollie Hays and her smaller sister, Susie had three bird dogs, and Gretchen Warmcastle I saw very busily brushing her Pekinese before the judges came around. Martha Jane Hankey was showing a huge bull dog and had the assistance of Mary Louise Warwick to manage him. And dogs and flowers weren't everything, there were lemonade and ice cream cone stands to attend.

Exhibit Pet Dogs

There's a flurry just now for rushing off to New York. Among the many paying visits to Gotham have been the junior Samuel McClements and the Ross E. Willises, who stopped at the St. Regis, and Mrs. Frederic C. Schiller, at the Weylin.

The W. U. Follansbees, the H. D. Williamses, Charles E. Beeson, R. S. Euler, Frank W. Main, and many others have been at the Biltmore.

Gotham Visitors

The Waldorf-Astoria attracted the H. T. Herrs, Mrs. William M. Furey, Mrs. David A. Cooper, George S. Ebbert and G. A. Blackmore.

Antoinette Vilsack, daughter of the Maurice Vilsacks, arrived in New York Friday on the Aquitania, after a year abroad with a traveling school.

Miss Frank Sets June 4 as Date Of Wedding

Miss Pearle Frank, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Frank, of Saline avenue, has announced June 4 as the date for her marriage to Harold Herwitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Herwitt, of Detroit, and the ceremony will take place in the garden of the Frank home, at 11 o'clock that morning.

Miss Frank has named her bridal party. Miss Selma Brown, of Warren, O., will be maid of honor, and bridesmaids will include Miss Ruth Herwitt, sister of the bridegroom-elect, of Detroit; Miss Gertrude Broida and Miss Flo Friedberg, of Pittsburgh, and the two little flower girls, nieces of the bride-elect, will be Jacqueline and Joy Baar, of Miami, Fla.

William Miller, of Cincinatti, will be best man, and ushers will include Cecil Frank, Sol Finkelhor, of Pittsburgh, and Herbert Ressler, of Detroit.

Georgia McKay Is Married to W. P. McKee

This afternoon at 4:30 o'clock Miss Georgia McKay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. McKay, of Dormont, becomes the bride of William Price McKee, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. N. McKee, also of Dormont, in the McKay home. Officiating is the Rev. E. C. McCown, of the Mt. Lebanon Methodist Episcopal Church.

The bride is wearing pink lace net and a close-fitting turban and carrying white roses. Her sister, Miss Florence McKay, is her only attendant, wearing embroidered blue organdie with a pink hat and carrying pink roses.

Alexander McKee is his brother's best man. Mr. McKee and his bride will live temporarily with the bride's parents.

The bride is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh and the bridegroom of the Pittsburgh School of Accountancy.

Miss Gelbach Has Home Wedding

Miss Elizabeth Gelbach and William Whiteford were married on Thursday evening in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel L. Gelbach, of Grandin avenue, Dormont, with the Rev. Hugh Franklin Smiley, of the Dormont Presbyterian Church, as the officiant. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Whiteford, of Rebecca street.

There was a buffet supper for the families after the ceremony. Mr. Whiteford and his bride will reside in Franklin avenue, Wilkinsburg, after June 15.

Gossipy Chat With Nancy Jane

The Harold J. Dorrances didn't take a cook with them when they went to their Foxburg, Pa., home this past summer, thinking just the family could manage.

But a house party, including David Marshall Humphrey, now La Salle Dorrance's fiance, arrived unexpectedly. And everyone had a grand lark cooking and washing dishes—including Mr. Humphreys!

The family of a little old lady—I won't mention her name—installed her with a nurse and housekeeping staff in a smaller house recently so she wouldn't have so much to worry her.

As a house-warming gift, her little great-granddaughter presented her with a baby kitten. Then the neighborhood dogs began to harry the kitten, and the great-grandmother worried about her little pet.

At last she found the solution to her worries. She and the nurse purchased a willow tree, and just as the great-grandmother had planned when the dogs chased the kitten, it ran up the willow tree and was free of worries, and so was the great-grandmother.

Edith Harnack Married in Church

Yesterday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock in the Point Breeze Church, Miss Edith Adele Harnack, daughter of Mrs. Theodore F. Harnack, of North Linden avenue, East End, became the bride of Leo H. Kilbert, son of Mrs. C. Kilbert, of Sharpsburg. Officiating was the Rev. Harold Ockenga.

The bride wore a gown of blue chiffon and lace with beige accessories and pink roses and her sister, Miss Betty Harnack, as maid of honor, wore beige crepe and a corsage of pink roses.

After an eastern trip Mr. Kilbert will be at home in the East End.

Miss M. Bowman Is Married in Bridgeville

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Bowman, of Bridgeville, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Mary Elizabeth Bowman, to John W. Seaman, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Seaman, of Bridgeville, which took place Thursday in the home of the Rev. A. A. Mealy, pastor of the Bethany Presbyterian Church of Bridgeville, who officiated.

Mr. and Mrs. Seaman left on an eastern motor trip and upon their return will be at home in Carnegie.

The bride is a graduate of Duffs-Iron City College.

Shannopin Country Club To Hold Dance Tuesday

The Shannopin Country Club announces a Memorial Day dinner dance to be held Tuesday evening, and a number of exciting events for June and July.

Every Sunday night during June from 5:30 to 8 o'clock there will be a musical tea. There will be special dances the nights of June 17, 24 and July 15, from 9 until 12 o'clock. And the admission is unusually low.

Marter's home. For program, Miss La Verda Dent will give a play review.

Tuxedo Horse Show Set For Friday and Saturday

NEW YORK—The Tuxedo Horse Show, established 35 years ago as a small exhibition, and now one of the most important outdoor affairs of its kind, will hold attention Friday and Saturday at Tuxedo Park, New York.

Mrs. David Wagstaff is president of the annual exhibition, which ranks only second in importance to the famous Tuxedo Autumn Ball.

State D. A. R. Conference To Be Held Oct. 17 to 20

At yesterday's meeting of Pittsburgh Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, announcement was made that the state conference will be held in Washington at the George Washington Hotel October 17 to 20. Washington, Canonsburg, Monongahela and Waynesburg chapters will be hostesses. Pittsburgh Chapter yesterday elected Miss Lydia Fleming as third vice regent and Mrs. Howard N. Eavenson as a director.

The Fort Pitt Society which met jointly with the chapter in the Hotel Schenley, elected these directors: Mrs. Robert T. Reineman, Miss Mary Burgwin, Mrs. W. Henry Singer, Mrs. Mortimer C. Miller, Mrs. William G. Hawkins, Jr., and Mrs. William J. Holland.

Mrs. Horace Forbes Baker, reporting for her conservation committee, stated that the chapter has planted 144 trees and given out 303 walnuts for planting, and the committee has written to various gas station owners asking that trees and shrubbery be planted by them.

Seventeen new members have been received into the chapter, bringing the total membership to 645.

The chapter is again presenting three prizes for the best school essays on United States history.

NEW SWIM AND BEACH TOGS ARE FEATURING GAY MATERIALS

REMINISCING IS, on the whole, dull sport, but it's quite fun to remember the bathing suit revolution that raged when women discarded long serge skirts and came right out in public in almost ankle length serge bloomers! Along with the skirts they discarded water wings and took to learning to swim.

THEN THE truth was borne in upon them that they couldn't make much headway trailing pounds and pounds of waterlogged material. The results, as you know, have been far-reaching. Suits have been reduced and reduced until now they're as near minimum as the law allows.

WITHIN THE last few seasons the "bra" suit has come to stay. There was the usual fuss when it first appeared, but no one gives it a thought now, except to admire its delightfully practical design. It's best done as you see it here, covering the tummy demurely. A sunburn can be painful, even dangerous.

THIS SUIT, on the lower left, is in a tweedy effect. Well made, with inner trunks supported by the shoulder straps.

ON THE right is a gingham suit. This dries in a jiffy and makes a dandy beach play-suit.

IN THE back is an older woman's suit, made with a graceful, more or less adjustable surplice-necked blouse top.

WHITE KNITTED slacks at the right are as tailored as a man's. They're worn with a simple red knitted shirt open at the neck in a poetic Byronesque line. Vastly becoming. Shirt and slacks meet with a red and white canvas belt—easy to buy, but even more fun to steal from your brother, who will pretend to be incensed, but will really feel flattered.

Young America Will Be Heard in Forum at Women's Congress

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

From headquarters of the National Council of Women comes word that "young America will have a forum for the expression of its view on contemporary civilization" at the International Congress on "Our Common Cause—Civilization," which the Council will sponsor at the Palmer House, Chicago, July 16-22.

There's something tremendously thrilling in the thought of delegations from leading women's colleges thronging the platform the morning of July 20 and voicing their undergraduate opinions on "Youth Plans a Civilized World."

And this is only one of several colorful program features. There's to be a session at which an Italian will present the principles of Fascism, a Russian, the principles of Communism, and a citizen of the United States will state the merits of democratic government.

And at a banquet distinguished international figures will discuss "The War Racket."

Lake Erie Head Gives College Girl Praise

The college girl of today is more or less misunderstood and misrepresented, but she goes out into life better prepared to meet its problems and is a more representative type than was the college girl of the 90's, Miss Vivian B. Small, president of Lake Erie College, told the Pittsburgh College Club yesterday afternoon.

In her talk on "The New-Old Outlook as College Women," Miss Small traced the history of higher education, beginning with Mary Lyon's work. In order to face present conditions, it is necessary to reincarnate the pioneer spirit of the early days, Miss Small declared.

Pi Lambda Theta Closes Season On Wednesday

Reports of theses and dissertations for advanced degrees will constitute the program of the last of this year's meetings of Delta Chapter of Pi Lambda Theta, women's national honorary education fraternity at the University of Pittsburgh. The meeting will be held Wednesday evening in Heinz House.

At this meeting these officers will be installed: Miss Jean Wabster Hay, president; Miss Charlotte Truby, vice president; Miss Edith E. Williamson, recording secretary; Miss Margaret M. Martin, corresponding secretary; Miss Katherine Maneval, treasurer; and Miss Mary Louden, keeper of records.

Summer Roundup Awards Made To P. T. A.'s

SEATTLE, May 27.—(AP.)—Nine state P. T. A. congresses were announced yesterday by officials of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers convention here as winners of awards for the 1932 summer "roundup" campaign in which city children are sent to summer camps and given other health-building advantages.

Des Moines, Ia., was named as the 1934 convention city.

NILES, Cal., May 27.—(INS.)—A slight earthquake was felt here at 9:34 o'clock last night. No damage was reported.

Congress Board Sees Traveling Kitchen

Sponsored by the Congress of Clubs, the traveling kitchen, which is being sent all over the country by the People's Natural Gas Company, made the Hotel Schenley its first stop yesterday. The Congress board and department and committee heads, with a few guests, met for luncheon, heard brief talks by Howell Cooper and Miss Pearl Gray, who, in addition to being the kitchen's official hostess, is also the newest member of the Congress.

Then they visited the kitchen, which is equipped and furnished to please the mind and eye (not to mention hands and feet) of the most captious housewife.

This rolling kitchen typifies the last word in improvement in household apparatus from the range with its stainless enamel table top adjustable to any working height, a fresh air oven, attached toaster and utility drawers for cooking utensils. There is a gas refrigerator, an ironer, a water heater, a compact sink with stainless steel drainboard, and even an incinerator which takes care of refuse right in the kitchen.

And as for small furnishings, any housewife might weep with envy of Miss Gray's task in providing her small domain with all the newest and brightest gadgets that go to make kitchen work easy and even enjoyable.

Home, Hospital Club Holds Benefit

Another benefit card party is being held today in the storeroom at Meade and Lincoln avenues, by the Home and Hospital Club of Bellevue. Announcement is made that the club will continue the dental clinic one day a week during the summer.

The women have contributed $30 towards the expenses of the High School Orchestra's trip to the Chicago Exposition.

The award was in recognition of aid he gave to the Eucharistic Congress in Dublin.

TELL IT TO ELSIE -:- Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day -:- By ELSIE ROBINSON

Girl Disapproves of Friends Picked by Mother

Must Nita go with the Big Boy because Mom thinks he's God's greatest gift to womankind?

Or has she a right to choose or refuse her own sweethearts?

A silly question? But you'd be surprised to find what trouble it makes in many a family. For though this is 1933, with Equal Rights for everybody, Mom still believes that she has a right to run Grown Up Daughters' lives. And what's a girl to do when she's in a spot like that?

Dear Elsie:

Will you please help me? I am 19 and I live with my family. My mother works, and so does my brother, who is older than I. I have two younger sisters. My father doesn't live with us, so Mother is boss of the family.

Just lately I broke up with the fellow I have been going with for four months. I broke with him because he was unreasonable and hard to get along with, and terribly jealous.

I didn't want to settle down yet, and he did. He wanted me to see no one but him, and to get married right away, but I didn't feel that way and told him so. I couldn't see any harm in going for a ride with my brother and his friends now and then, but he got angry when I did it, and left in a huff, so I thought if that was the way he felt he could just go.

MOTHER OBJECTS

Now my mother has taken a liking to him and blames me for his going away. Since he went, I have gone out with my brother and his friends a couple of times and mother has a fit, although the fellows my brother knows are just as decent as you would find anywhere. This fellow I was going with told her a lot of lies about them, and she believed them. I found out myself that they were lies.

Now, just because I broke off with that fellow, my mother doesn't want me to go out, even if my brother is along. The last time I went she yelled out of the window at me, and when I came in she accused me of a lot of things. She said the next time these friends came to the house she was going to tell them to get out.

She is mad because, she says, I "can't be satisfied with one fellow." But I don't think I have to pick on the first fellow who comes along and marry him, whether I like him or not. She seems to think I should.

She acted this way once before, when I broke with a fellow who wanted me to go with him. Now she is at it again.

Please tell me, is she right? Or am I? NITA.

Should mother pick your husband for you?

Of course she shouldn't!

Even if you choose the wrong one, it's up to you to do your own choosing. And if you can't get along with a man, there isn't one sane reason on earth for marrying him, even though he seems a saint to everyone else.

A NATURAL INTEREST

But there's also another side to the question, Nita. Suppose you'd put 19 years on the job—19 hard-working, sacrificing, devoted years of unselfish labor. At the end of those 19 years, would you feel that you had an interest in that job? Would you think that you had a right to vote on its future? Of course you would! And that's how and why your mother feels as she does today.

For 19 years, during most of which you were a helpless, ornery little tad, you were your mother's job. She had to work for you, think of you, almost breathe for you. Naturally, she still remembers that time—still doubts your ability to go ahead under your own steam.

So, when she seems unreasonable, remember those years. Some day you'll be giving your life-time to your daughter. Won't you, when that time comes, want to see her make good, after all your sacrifice? Won't you want to see her pick the right man—and won't you maybe be a little unreasonable yourself about who is the right man?

Think it over, youngster. She has hurt you now, and she's plainly in the wrong. But don't forget the weary nights and the dreary days when she was so beautifully, so lovingly in the right.

'A DUET'

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

This is not Tweedle-dum and Tweedle-dee intoning a stave, but Jill and that Spring-time fellow, Eros, fingering a madrigal for Jack. Spring is outside for these two; for YOU it is raining perhaps under a low gray sky. But not for Jack and Jill and Love. For them the almond blossoms show through the gray curtain in pink flame. For them the thrush sings, as he does indeed for any happy heart with listening ears, through any weather. For them Beauty spreads her skirts like any peacock and trails them over the new grass. Spring's mannequin. For them the unclouded sky is always there, superbly blue above dark clouds.

Love, Beauty, Happiness and Music come into one's mind together. "Music is the food of Love." And a heart in love feeding upon music, in its turn must sing. Without music the world would be a strange stolid place. As it would be, we all know, without Love.

Have you ever had a mad, sad, restless heart and felt it grow calm and at ease, lose itself on a river of sound, wading ecstatically in sounding color; as if knee deep in violets? That's rather mixed up, but I betcha you know what I mean if music is something in your life, too!

Have you watched two lovers, serenely believing that no one in the world suspects their passion, listening over their food to "Florian's Song" or Schubert's "Serenade?"

"Love makes the world go 'round," and Music adds its genius finger to make it whirl. Listen and see if "the music of the spheres" is not a Love Song?

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Introducing a Husband

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—Should I introduce my husband to friends as "Mr. Blue," or just say, "May I present my husband," omitting his name?

2—After the death of my husband, am I still related to his people? READER.

1—"May I present my husband" is the correct form.

2—You are "related" to your in-laws in just the same way you were when your husband was living.

Note of Thanks

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Dr. "A" recommended me to a specialist, to have him perform an operation, and asked him to give me a reduced price. I would like to send Dr. "A" a note of thanks, and tell him also how pleased I was with the specialist.

Mrs. Beeckman, I would appreciate it if you would send me an example of such a note. Do you think a gift would be necessary, and what would you advise? I cannot afford to spend very much—between five and 10 dollars. L.

Your letter to Dr. "A" might be worded something like this:

Dear Dr. Adams:

I do want to have you know how deeply and sincerely I appreciate your goodness to me, and your gracious courtesy in talking over with me my health problem and giving me your very expert professional judgment. It was tremendously helpful to me, and I thank you most heartily.

Dr. Graham, to whom you referred me, I found most skilful. He performed my operation, and now I am, thanks to you and to him, well again and feeling most fit.

Thank you again, Dr. Adams, and all friendly greetings and good wishes to you.

Very sincerely yours,

A gift would not be necessary, but, if you wish to make a gesture of this kind, a book would be a good present, or a clock for his reception room, say, or a subscription to one or two magazines for his office, or several plain white linen handkerchiefs, preferably monogrammed simply, or a fountain pen and pencil set.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

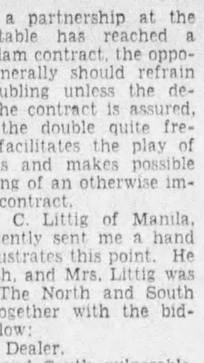
A Costly Double

When a partnership at the Bridge table has reached a Grand-Slam contract, the opponents generally should refrain from doubling unless the defeat of the contract is assured, because the double quite frequently facilitates the play of the cards and makes possible the making of an otherwise impossible contract.

Mr. J. C. Littig of Manila, P. I., recently sent me a hand which illustrates this point. He was South, and Mrs. Littig was North. The North and South hands, together with the bidding, follow:

South, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.



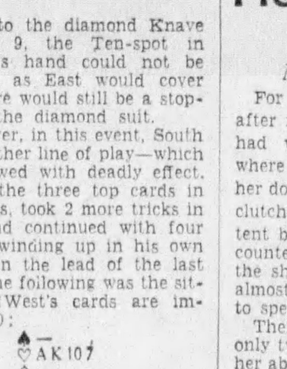
The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 NT	Pass	6 NT	Double
7 NT	Pass	Pass	Double
Redouble	Pass	Pass	Pass

North and South's bidding was possibly slightly optimistic in view of the failure to find a fit in either hearts or diamonds. However, they held every Ace-King and three of the four Queens and could count 12 tricks in top cards. In view of this, perhaps their bidding cannot be strongly condemned.

East's Double of six notrump, however, was very bad. When the Dummy went down, after West's opening lead of a club, it made practically certain that East held the heart Queen-Knave and the diamond Knave guarded by at least three small cards. Should one of the guards to the diamond Knave be the 9, the Ten-spot in Dummy's hand could not be finessed, as East would cover and there would still be a stopper in the diamond suit.

However, in this event, South had another line of play—which he followed with deadly effect. He led the three top cards in diamonds, took 2 more tricks in clubs and continued with four spades, winding up in his own hand. On the lead of the last spade, the following was the situation (West's cards are immaterial):



Faced with the choice of a discard, East now realized that further defense was impossible. He must either discard the diamond Knave, establishing two diamonds in the South hand, or unguard his Queen-Knave of hearts, assuring the establishment of the Ten for the thirteenth trick.

The result of the Double is easy to see. Possibly Mr. Littig would have found the key to the correct play without it, but certainly East's Double facilitated the discovery

TODAY'S QUESTION

Your partner has opened the bidding with two notrump and Second Hand has passed. What do you bid, holding:

♠ 7 6 5 ♡ 3 2 ◇ 5 4 ♣ Q 10 8 7 3 2

Answer: Three clubs. This bid is justified by the length in the suit. If partner holds three clubs to an honor the chances are that three notrump can be made.

Heart of a Wife -:- Continuation of Love's Reawakening

Madge Searches for Marion While Battle Rages

For the fraction of a second after my discovery that Marion had vanished from the spot where Charles Owen had flung her down, I stood still, my hands clutching my throat in impotent bewildered panic. I had so counted upon finding her that the shock of her disappearance almost robbed me of the power to speak or act.

There were two theories, and only two, that could account for her absence from the spot where Owen had left her. Either she had been able to get away herself, or someone had removed her. The first hypothesis seemed untenable, because of the way she was bound and gagged. Yet I knew how dauntless was her spirit, how great her ingenuity. I had a sudden vision of her rolling her bound body swiftly away from Owen's vicinity as soon as he should have put her down upon the ground.

But, of course, the probable answer to the problem was that there had been another man in the car with Owen, and that he was even now carrying Marion back to the barred security of Jerry's, and there leaving her while he dashed back to aid Owen in his battle with Ronald.

WORRIED ABOUT RONALD

One thing was certain. Whichever theory was correct, Marion needed me, and I forced my nerves into quietude, my muscles into action. From behind me there came the sound of intermittent revolver shots, which seemed, as nearly as I could judge, to be lessening instead of increasing; above me came the zooming of the hovering autogyro, at one side I could hear the thud of fist on flesh and the heavy breathing of Ronald and Charles Owen engaged in savage combat, but before me there was no sound, and my eyes, strain them as I would, could distinguish nothing in the darkness.

It was into that darkness that I forced my feet, reluctant, not from cowardice—I acquitted myself on that score; but from fear of leaving Ronald while the outcome of his fight with Owen was undecided. Ronald had youth and right, and justifiable rage upon his side, but the older man had experience and craft, and a capacity for evil and treachery which the boy had no means of gauging. I trembled for fear Owen might succeed in evading Ronald's grasp long enough to enable him to draw the revolver with which I was sure he was armed. That he would not hesitate to shoot the boy who had been raised as his nephew, I was certain, and that knowledge almost made me turn back in my quest for Marion.

But I knew, of course, that such a course was impossible for me. My place was with Marion, and I pressed on into the darkness, pausing however, at every three or four steps to listen, hoping that I could hear some sound betraying her presence.

But no slightest sound indicating her proximity came to my ears, and I did not dare to call out her name for fear of betraying my whereabouts to the man who might be aiding Owen, and thus jeopardize my slender chance of finding her.

LANDING DELAYED

I looked up at the zooming autogyro above me, my fear for Dicky—and Hugh, now smothered in a testy, unreasoning, thoroughly feminine wonder as to their reason for remaining aloft in that hovering position, instead of landing and giving what would probably be the deciding blow in Marion's rescue. I had a wild, fantastic impulse to signal to them.

And then—as I stood still once more and gazed upward at that hovering shape above me, I suddenly realized why Dicky and Hugh were delaying their landing.

They were waiting for the moon—that moon which had mercifully appeared long enough for me to see Charles Owen on horseback with Marion in his arms proceeding down the mountain side; but which later had been shadowed by clouds so dark and dense that there might as well have been no moon at all for any use it was to our vision.

Everything indicated a storm either later in the night or the next morning, and I knew that even though there was a distinct lightening of the clouds, promising that the moon might show herself briefly, it would be but a feeble imitation of her usual refulgence. But it might suffice to give Dicky a margin of safety in landing the autogyro.

I brought my eyes down to earth, saw that the darkness was lessening ever so slightly. Then a low voice close to my ear said triumphantly:

"Baby! Look! See what I have for you!"

MY OWN LIFE STORY -:- By Evelyn Nesbit Thaw

Pride in Son All She Has Left, Says Evelyn, Concluding Life Story

CHAPTER XXI.

I visited frequently with Harry at the asylum. To say that his incarceration irked him is putting it mildly. He was furious at the outcome of the second trial. But he had many unusual privileges.

He was not forced to be confined with the other inmates, but had large quarters to himself, and whenever I visited him, I was permitted to see him alone. No guard disturbed these visits.

There were also automobile drives when I accompanied him, a chiffon veil covering my face, late at night, to roadhouses and country inns.

We had many quarrels during this period. Harry was annoyed because I insisted in living in New York and would not take a cottage near the asylum.

Eventually, I discovered that I was about to become a mother, and not wishing to create another "Thaw sensation" at the time, quietly made plans for the arrival of my child. I took a couple of my close friends into my confidence and we decided that I should go to Europe in order to avoid any further publicity.

Off to Europe

In the late spring of 1910, accompanied by a friend of "Florodora" days, I set sail for Germany. To this day I smile when I recall how I boarded that ship under the eyes of many newspapermen who knew my face as well as they did their own and still staved off recognition.

My disguise must have been perfect. I wore low, flat-heeled shoes, a cheap linen duster, my hair piled on top of my head on which perched a funny brown hat, ideally suited to a New England schoolmarm. I made up my face with fine lines about the mouth and eyes, and wore tortoise-shell rimmed glasses and a brown mesh veil. In this garb I marched boldly up the gangplank through a lane of reporters whom I recognized, and not one of them recognized me. I breathed a sigh of relief!

I spent a couple of months in the beautiful Hartz Mountains and then went to Berlin to be within reach of expert medical care.

My son was born on October 25, 1910, and as soon as I was able to leave the hospital I returned to this country, via London and Halifax, and for 15 months no one in the world except myself and my two or three confidantes knew that a Thaw heir had come into being.

Income Stopped

During 1912 the small income I had been receiving from my husband was suddenly stopped, and I had a difficult time trying to support myself and my baby. Piece by piece I sold what was left of my jewelry. Finally I was reduced to selling my rugs and paintings. I became desperate. There were days when we actually went hungry.

During this period I had discovered I had a talent for sculpture and had devoted considerable time to that art. But there was no money in that.

The only training I had ever had for earning a livelihood was the stage and I shrank from such public appearances. The notoriety of the Thaw case made it impossible for me to seek odd jobs as another woman might, so, all in all, I was in a pretty desperate plight.

A year went by—the baby and I living from hand to mouth—and then Fate played me a good turn. Some friends were planning a trip abroad. They invited me to go along and bring the baby. It was a Godsend!

On board ship were many theatrical people, including Lee Shubert, Martin Beck, Gaby Delys and Harry Pilcer, H. B. Marinelli, the great international theatrical agent, and Albert de Courville, director of the London Hippodrome.

All the way over these people kept urging me to return to the stage. They pointed out all the advantages.

"Think what it would mean," said Shubert and Beck. "Plenty of money to raise your son properly, to give him every luxury and advantage."

Back to Stage

But I didn't want to go back to the stage; didn't like the idea at all. It filled me with terrior—being the object of curiosity. For years I had resisted all such offers. American agents and vaudeville managers had tried to tempt me with lucrative offers over and over again, but I always turned them down.

In the end I capitulated—partly. I signed a tentative contract with Marinelli to the effect that if I did return to the stage, it would be under his direction.

I had been in Paris just about two weeks when Albert de Courville came over from London. He persuaded me to sign a contract with him, Marinelli acting as my agent, to appear that very summer at the London Hippodrome in "Hello Ragtime," a successful revue starring Ethel Levy.

The dance craze was just beginning and had hit London and Paris with a bang. Marinelli suggested that I find a dancing partner and do a modern dancing act. DeCourville approved the idea, and after scouting around, we selected Jack Clifford, who was then dancing in Paris.

Albert de Courville had a wonderful idea for my debut. Just to see what would happen, with no names on the program, no press announcements, not even members of the company knowing about it in advance, he arranged for my dancing act at the matinees.

"What's the idea?" I asked him.

"Just to see what will happen," he answered. "Just sheer curiosity. No one in the audience will know you. I just want to see how the act goes over on its own merits."

Oh, believe me, I was terrified! I wore Russell's first little shirt against my heart, pinned under my costume, for good luck.

The act went over! DeCourville was delighted. Then we had our official opening and for the first time I saw my name in electric lights over a theater!

The theater was jammed. Breathless and happy at the end of the act, baskets and baskets of gorgeous flowers were handed to me over the footlights. Then followed my London engagement. During this engagement I was approached by Arthur Hammerstein, who offered me a contract to appear in New York.

I was terror-stricken at the mere thought of a New York appearance, visualizing hordes of curious people. On the other hand, I had spent so many sleepless nights, pitching and tossing in my bed, worrying where my next meal for the baby was coming from, that I had finally decided that vaudeville work was the lesser of the two evils. And so I signed the contract.

Divorced

Immediately upon my arrival in New York, when it became known that I was under contract to appear upon the stage, I was besieged by Thaw's creditors who wanted me to pay bills which had been outstanding since the trials. On the advice of an attorney, I filed a petition in bankruptcy.

My New York debut was a tremendous sensation. Then followed several seasons of touring all over the country.

It was during one of these tours and shortly after Harry's spectacular escape from Matteawan and his final technical release that he divorced me in Pittsburgh. I could not appear, as I was playing out west, contract-bound.

For the next few years I worked very hard. I made several motion pictures in addition to my vaudeville appearances and I rehearsed constantly to improve my act. Then during a lull between engagements I decided to open a tearoom. This venture for a time was a success, too.

Then I became ill. I had to give up the tea room. I could sign no further contracts for either pictures or stage engagements. A long period of recuperation was necessary. I went to Atlantic City.

When I regained my health I received an offer to appear in night club. I hadn't the vaguest idea or knowledge concerning the night club business, but again it was imperative for me to earn a livelihood. So I consented. That was the beginning of the 10 hardest years I have ever spent.

Constant night club work is a terrific strain. It may be a thrill for people to spend an evening in a night club now and then, but to spend every night from 11 o'clock until 5, 6, 7, and, sometimes 8 o'clock in the morning in one is quite another matter; a terrible strain on the nervous system.

A year ago I had to stop. Doctors warned me that my health would not stand it.

Pride in Son

During all these years I have never made any effort to claim any of the Thaw money for either myself or my son. I have several times been called to his defense and have always responded. But today, just as in the past, I am entirely on my own resources, with everything behind me and nothing tangible before me except a continued pride in the selfmade, self-reliant manhood of my boy.

From the very beginning he has been my one comfort and joy. The realization that I have accomplished that one thing—raised that fine young man—makes me feel that I have not lived in vain.

But looking back over the past and thinking of the many hardships I have endured, the notoriety that has followed me for 27 years, the results of America's greatest cause celebre, I am forced to answer those who ask:

"If you had it to do all over again, would you do it?"

"No—not for a man I didn't love."

(THE END.)

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

Startling but exceedingly smart is the slinky evening frock of black lacquered satin worn with a fluffy boa made of crisp white organdie petals.

Going away, pack an evening gown of lace if you want to look smart in the evening. An ideal week-end evening ensemble is of black Chantilly lace worn with a fichu-cape of net and lace, fastened with pastel chiffon flowers. The frock has a tailored black grosgrain ribbon belt.

Hay Fever Season Near, Take Precautions Now!

At this time of the year I receive many letters requesting information about hay fever. We are approaching the hay fever season. The victims of this ailment know that unless they quickly take the necessary precautions they are doomed to weeks of intolerable suffering.

Dr. Copeland

Hay fever is a disease characterized by a sensitivity to certain pollens. The pollens may come from trees, grasses or ragweed. When exposed to these pollens the victim complains of itching and congestion of the eyes. There is a thin and irritating discharge from the nose. The inside of the mouth itches and there are violent attacks of sneezing.

The symptoms are aggravated by repeated exposure to the offending pollen or plant. As a rule, the suffering is more marked in the morning and relieved as evening approaches. The sensitivity persists as long as the offending substance is within reach of the patient.

"Perennial hay fever" is a form of hay fever present throughout the year. The sufferer from this form of hay fever is sensitive to animal danders, vegetable powders, house dust, foods or drugs. The symptoms are identical with those caused by a pollen or plant.

Do not confuse hay fever with asthma. The asthmatic sufferer has difficulty in breathing and complains that he cannot catch his breath. The hay fever patient can breathe, but it causes him great discomfort. Of course a victim of hay fever may also be a sufferer from asthma, both diseases existing at the same time.

It is only within recent years that a hopeful remedy for hay fever has been discovered. The treatment is not successful in all cases. It consists of the injection of vaccines made from a solution of the ragweed pollen or other pollen to which the victim is sensitive.

The injections must be given over a long period of time and preferably before the hay fever season begins. By means of "sensitivity tests," it is possible to determine the plant, pollen or substance to which the sufferer is sensitive. When this is discovered, the vaccine is made and then injected.

Unfortunately, the relief is only temporary and the injections must be repeated. If you are a sufferer from hay fever, now is the time to consult with your physician. Also, I would advise you to take the necessary measures if you are a victim of autumn hay fever or perennial hay fever.

Answers to Health Queries

V. W. A. Q.—Would an operation for a fallen stomach be successful?

A.—Yes, in most instances.

A Reader. Q.—Can poor vision be corrected any other way besides wearing glasses?

A.—No, properly fitted glasses should prove corrective.

RISE IN STEEL PRODUCTION SMALLER

By B. E. V. LUTY

Production of steel ingots this week was at about 37 per cent of capacity, representing the second weekly rise of one point after six weeks averaging three points gain each week. A substantial increase next week is certain for the general trend is upward and Edgar Thomson at Braddock resumed yesterday afternoon. It represents fully 2 per cent of the entire steel making capacity of the country and will run at more than half capacity, making 12,400 tons of rails for the Pennsylvania Railroad and a substantial tonnage of sheet bars for nearby tin plate mills.

Both privately expressed opinion and public statements at the American Iron and Steel Institute meeting in New York on Thursday indicate that the majority of the steel producers do not think steel activity can avoid what is regarded as its usual summer recession. Outside the steel producing trade, however, it is pointed out that while the rule of a summer slackening worked almost perfectly up to 1926, in that year and in 1929 it failed signally. Undoubtedly, however, any large further increase would not come until later, by building and the railroads beginning to absorb something like their usual proportion of the steel made.

GENERAL DEMAND GOOD

Demand for steel outside the automobile trade continues to be of highly miscellaneous character and the miscellaneous consumers must be doing quite well or steel production could not be at 55 per cent of its average in the seven years through 1929, when railroads, building and the oil and gas industry were taking large tonnages against very little now.

Automobile production in April as just reported officially totaled 189,284 cars and trucks, United States and Canada, or somewhat above the average of estimates made at the close of the month. This represented fully one-fourth of the steel made during April, but even estimating automobile production now at a rate of 215,000 a month the industry represents no more than one-fifth of the steel now being made.

Operation of the tin plate industry jumped from about 66 per cent last week to fully 80 per cent this week. The highest rate attained last year was scarcely above 50 per cent. Part of the recent increase is due to a sudden decision of the Hawaiian pineapple trade to pack 8,000,000 cases instead of the 6,000,000 originally scheduled.

BAR ADVANCE HINTED

In the last few weeks there have been many inquiries for relatively small lots of line pipe, by interests which can do their financing themselves, and a fair tonnage of business is expected. Financing of very large lines is still out of the question.

As reported a week ago, some of the sheet mills have been opening order books for third quarter at advances of $3 a ton over prices as recently advanced, but such action has not become universal and there remains some doubt. The slight advances in strips are an actuality.

For several weeks there have been rumors that an advance would be made on bars, shapes and plates, the regular quotation on which has been 1.60c, Pittsburgh, for more than a year. In the past week there have been some definite predictions that an advance would be announced next week.

DISTRESS SCRAP GONE

Sellers of semi-finished steel are making no definite statements, but intimate that should the proposed advance in sheets hold there ought to be an advance of a couple dollars a ton. The regular quotation has been $26 a ton for more than a year, on billets, slabs and sheet bars, Pittsburgh, Youngstown or Cleveland.

The Pittsburgh district scrap market has been very quiet, but is only slightly easier in tone and actual quotations have not declined. While dealers have almost completed their short orders there is virtually no distress material on the market.

STOCKS BULGE IN HEAVY TRADING

NEW YORK, May 27.—(AP.)—The stock market bounded up sharply under heavy buying today.

Advances ranged from 1 to 8 points, with prices churning heavily near their top levels at the end of the first hour. Gold shares and industrial leaders were in prominent demand, while rails moved strongly ahead.

Union Pacific was up 6½ points on an initial transfer of 4,000 shares. Homestake advanced 8, while American Telephone and United States Steel preferred advanced more than 5 points each. Trading facilities were taxed with the stock ticker considerably in arrear.

Reflective study by the financial community of the administration move with respect to repealing the gold clause in contracts led to a clearer understanding of the objectives in mind. The resolution does not propose to cut the gold content of the dollar but is rather a legal recognition of situation which has obtained ever since the country went off the gold standard.

The late rally yesterday in the market was attributed to a misunderstanding of the position of the dollar under the terms of the proposed measure.

The dollar was weak in terms of foreign exchanges today. Sterling opened at $3.96.3/4, an overnight gain of 5 cents, while French francs stood at 4.64 cents, an increase of 7 points.

NEW BUILDING IN UPTREND

NEW YORK, May 27.—(AP.)—Reporting a "continuing universal improvement" in building, L. Seth Schnitman, chief statistician of the F. W. Dodge Corporation, announced that construction for the first three weeks of May in 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains exceeds the whole month of April.

The Dodge figures, based on contracts awarded, show a total of $16,388,900 for the third week, ending May 22, in the 37 states, bringing the total for the first three weeks of the month to $58,104,300.

Residential building for the week totaled $6,562,300, bringing the three weeks' total to $19,357,600. The statistician said:

"The daily rate is running neck and neck with last year and it now appears very likely that the total residential building for the month will exceed the total for the same month a year ago."

DOLLAR FALLS IN EUROPE

LONDON, May 27.—(INS.)—The American dollar fell sharply on the London Exchange today, closing at $3.96 to the pound sterling after opening weak at $3.95. Yesterday's close was $3.90½.

Weakening of the dollar was believed caused by President Roosevelt's request for abolition of the gold payment clause in private and public obligations.

The pound closed at $4.51 on Montreal and 85⅝ francs on Paris.

Stocks closed cheerful, stimulated by buoyant conditions on Wall street.

The dollar opened in Paris at 21.69 francs against 21.95 last night. It bought 3.60 marks in Berlin as against 3.61 yesterday. In Vienna, it was worth 5.99 schillings as against 6.09 yesterday.

CHICAGO BANK RATE CUT

WASHINGTON, May 27.—(AP.)—The Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago announced it had reduced its rediscount rate from 3½ per cent to 3 per cent effective today. The announcement was made through the Federal Reserve Board here.

The action of the Chicago bank is the second drop in rediscount rates in two days, New York having lowered its rate from 3 to 2½ per cent Thursday.

The other 10 banks of the Federal Reserve System maintain a 3½ per cent rate.

The change at Chicago is the first since March 4 when the rate was increased from 2½ to 3½ per cent.

CAR LOADINGS UP FOR WEEK

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Loading of revenue freight during the week ended May 20 totaled 531,618 cars, an increase of 523 cars over the previous week and 15,990 cars over the like 1932 week, according to American Railway Association.

Empire Steel Plan Submitted to Court

CLEVELAND, May 27.—(AP.)—Federal Judge Samuel West today had under consideration a plan for reorganizing the Empire Steel Corporation so that the receivership now in effect may be lifted.

The plan was submitted by a reorganization committee headed by Otto Miller, chairman, and provides for a 20-year bond issue and the issuance of common stock.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Footnote

Another chapter ended with goodbye;
Another closely written page face down.
Your name that was forever on my lips,
Is nothing but another proper noun.

What used to be our private Paradise
Is just another rather shabby room.
Day-end, that one time brought a welcomed night,
Now offers, in the wake of gladness, gloom.

The golden present which was so alive
Is now a dimming past that's gathered rust.
Your picture smiling from my mantelpiece
Is just another thing I have to dust.

Form of Criticism

"My oldest daughter Marjorie," writes Eddie Cantor in an article, "was just graduating from high school and was guest dramatic editor of a Hollywood paper for a week. They offered her the job for the Summer at $10 a week as a columnist. The pay of columnists must be going up."

Don't be so plural!

Quiteso, Quiteso

"And," adds Buffalo Correspondent, "the honeymoon is positively over—when she gets heavy on his lap."

How Heads Melt

Not all of us realize how local we are. Some of us really imagine that we are household names—and all the time we thought the radio sound waves made us better known that it appears we ain't.

After carelessly passing a red light yesterday a motor cop putt-putted up and motioned us to the curb. After looking at our license he queried:

"Are you Winchell?"

"Yes,'" we answered hopefully.

"What," was the devastating squelch, "do you do?"

Was His Face Flaming?

When the playboy son of a well-known banker returned from England some time ago he had been jilted by a gal there and sulked at the world.

All that day his friends kidded him mercilessly. That evening the chap was fed up with it all. The phone rang.

"Mr. B.?" said the voice.

"Yes," was the glum reply.

"This is Herbert Hoover," said the caller.

Convinced he was being teased again the son screamed:

"You dirty, lousy no good !!$&!(. . . . ."

Then he banged the receiver.

Ten minutes later when a call came for "Mr. B. Senior," the young man switched it to his father upstairs. Later Senior raced down to ask his boy if he knew who called the President of the United States "a vile name."

No Respect for Age

Suggested theme song title for some radio comic by Eddie Mains:

"I Found a Million-Dollar Joke Book in the Five and Ten-Cent Store."

Add Slanguage

Bogart Rogers, war ace and author of the screen play "The Eagle and the Hawk," forwards these bits of aviation slang: A plane is always a crate, a bus or a ship . . . Aerial torpedoes are pills . . . An officer who stays on the ground is a kee-wee . . . A parachute is a jump-stick or an umbrella . . . A battle is a show—firing a machine gun is "singing a song."

Novelette

Dr. M. J. Slocum, of Flower Hospital (who once covered the waterfront for the Brooklyn Eagle), stopped his ambulance at a drug store on Broadway near Fifty-seventh street recently to buy some supplies. The affable manager who waited on Dr. Slocum remarked:

"Ambulance cases are very bad for drug stores. They clutter up the place."

Then, knocking on wood, the manager added:

"We've been lucky at this store. Only had one ambulance call in our time."

The doctor rapped his knuckles on wood, too.

A few days later Flower Hospital received a hurry-up summons to the same drug store. Dr. Slocum was assigned. Elbowing his way through the sidewalk crowd he saw the manager between cops, who were making notes.

It was a "D. O. A." case—Dead On Arrival. A heart attack.

It was the manager, who knocked on wood and frowned on "ambulance cases"—which "cluttered up the place."

Marion Davies True Irish As Peg

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Something very extraordinary has happened in Hollywood and became known in the Penn Theater yesterday. Harlley Manner's old play, "Peg o' My Heart," has been turned into a picture which is much better than the play. And Marion Davies acts the title role much better than Laurette Taylor, for whom it was written by her husband, the dramatist. This is extraordinary.

Mr. Seibel

The romance is woven out of wool that has been used a hundred times and always wears well. Here is a lovely Irish lass living with her poor father, and two million pounds are left her with the proviso that she goes to England to be educated and does not see her father for three years.

Her golden heart remains uncorrupted in her new world, and the handsome young agent who brought her from a fisherman's hut to castle halls at last wins her after he has very nearly thrown himself away on a fine young lady who is not as fine as she looks.

Marion Davies mavourneens the part of Peg beautifully. She has never done more delicious comedy work—she plays with a relish and sincerity that should get her a medal from the Irish Free State. Her brogue is captivating—her arch smile is like a ripple on Lake Killarney—her serious moments are like a strain from Tara's harp. It is all very natural and refreshing, and we even forget to wonder how she acquired the knack of gracefully wearing such ravishing frocks and negligees while a few hundred feet of film are unreeled. It must be the native cleverness of Irish colleens.

And besides Marion Davies there's a notably fine cast. Onslow Stevens is a hero who looks intelligent as well as handsome. J. Farrell MacDonald as the Irish father achieves the miracle of pathos that doesn't go maudlin. Juliette Compton plays a conventional deceitful female well enough to deceive anybody. Tyrrell Davis is gleefully absurd as the idiotic scion of the aristocratic family.

But next to Marion Davies the dog Mutt, who plays Michael, is worthy of undiluted admiration. This dog is better-looking and has more intelligence than half a dozen popular Hollywood heroes whom it is not necessary to name. Sirius is known as the dog-star—but if there is any authority vested in Dublin Observatory to change stellar names, Sirius ought to be rechristened after Mutt.

Beautiful Irish scenery and a lovely English castle, a hunt with a breakfast that gives the colleen Peg a chance to lead in singing, and finally a romantic festival back on the Ould Sod, where the hero finds his Peg and both are happy with Michael forever after—all this rounds out the picture. There are no snakes in this Ireland.

After the shamrock comes that Laurel who is associated with Hardy, and they have one of their most laughable farces, with more humor and less horseplay than would be thought possible. It's a great week at the Penn.

Morgan Heard On Screen

THE GLOBE TROTTER

The first pictures ever brought to the screen of J. P. Morgan are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. The Wall street colossus is seen and heard as he appeared before the United States Senate investigating committee in Washington. Views include interesting close-ups, showing the witness calm, suave and oft-times smiling under the volley of questions from Ferdinand Pecora and the committeemen.

An attempt on the part of Nazi sympathizers in Vienna to break up a parade of the Heimwehr, celebrating the 250th anniversary of the city's freedom from Turkish rule, results in a riot with many thrilling incidents. The Globe Trotter describes the scenes.

For the first time a girl, Gazella Weinrich, is one of the entrants of a great walking marathon, the 31-mile race for the national championship in Baltimore. Philip Talkelski, the winner, and Pat Dengis, second, collapse from exhaustion when they cross the line.

Australia's famous jumping horses bring many thrills to the screen when they are put through their paces at the Royal Stock Show in Sydney.

Jimmy Mattern is seen and heard as he tunes up for a solo globe-girdling hop, which he expects to start soon from New York.

John Milton Phillips, Kansas City boy who recently won the national oratorical contest in Washington, tells how proud he is of the honor and repeats a part of his essay on the United States constitution.

The Valley Forge Military Academy, at Wayne, Pa., has a stilt company which parades over the campus.

Two Pictures In Davis

By WILLIAM T. SCHOYER

A not entirely successful attempt to capture the subtleties of continental drama is made in the film, "The Kiss Before the Mirror," at the Davis and Sheridan Square.

The murder of an unfaithful wife by a jealous husband starts off the show. Then the defense attorney for the murderer tries his client's test for infidelity on his own wife. And the kiss before the mirror reveals that he too is being betrayed.

On the rather clever theme of whether the attorney, Frank Morgan, shall follow out the dual situation and shoot his wife, too, the show rises to a tense climax in the courtroom scene where the murderer is acquitted.

Nancy Carroll is the second faithless wife. Paul Lukas the first avenging husband.

"Below the Sea," co-feature, is a tale of search for gold in a sunken submarine, undertaken by two pretty tough customers. Love, in the person of Fay Wray, softens up one of the searchers, Ralph Bellamy, before he can reach the fabulous fortune, and he fights an octopus to save her instead. But with a sea fight, storm, some good double-crossing by the avaricious captain of the sunken submarine, final revenge and a happy ending, it's a pretty good adventure yarn.

Irene Dunne Goes Melo

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, May 27.—Another step has been taken in the campaign—don't tell me you haven't noticed it—to inject a splash of color into the film roles of Irene Dunne.

The serene-looking star with the lovely voice is to do "Stingaree," an exciting melodrama of the Australian back country. The heroine of this E. W. Hornung novel is a singer who falls in love with a Robin Hood of the bushlands.

What with this role and with "Frivolous Sal," a vivid story of New York in the '90s, Irene says goodbye to the modern domestic dramas in which she mainly has been featured on the screen.

In private life, the star remains one of the most retiring of Hollywood celebrities. She lives with her mother, stays away from filmland's favorite haunts, and plays lots of golf. Every so often, she goes to New York to visit her doctor-husband.

When she plays "Stingaree," Merian C. Cooper, headman at RKO, will try to get Leslie Banks to come over from England and do the Robin Hood. Banks was that swell actor you saw in "The Most Dangerous Game."

The MGM studio ban on dogs has so upset Alice Brady that she has been making the rounds of her working friends' houses and taking their pets for long automobile rides. The stage star used to take four dogs to the studio when she was making "When Ladies Meet."

Josephine Saenz and John Wayne are looking at Mexico City folders in planning that June honeymoon . . . Failing to get away to Hawaii or even Palm Springs, Constance Bennett is trying to cure that cold by lying in the sun at the Beach. She's reading four stories but at last report hasn't decided what to do as her final RKO picture.

When Buster Crabbe does "Tarzan" for Sol Lesser, Jacqueline Wells will get the lead opposite him. She's another graduate of the Pasadena Community Players . . . In one of his typical quick decisions, Doug Fairbanks left for New York several days before he had expected to. He took Tom Geraghty along to do some work on the Chinese story.

BALLET BEAUTIES OF 'GOLD DIGGERS OF 1933,' LOOKING FOR GOLD DUST TO PAY MORTGAGE ON OLD HOME

Stanley Stars Robinson in Comedy

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

The theme of incongruity, as often expressed in the simile about the elephant in a china shop, is the humorous idea behind "The Little Giant," comedy film in the Stanley that features Edward G. Robinson as a reformed racketeer who goes from the badlands of Chicago to crash the gates of California society. That is, Eddie stays reformed until he finds that society "took" him and made him, the toughest guy in Chicago, look like the chap who bought the Brooklyn Bridge, and then he resumes his old policies to straighten matters out. And that's all right with the audience, too.

While it's not Robinson's funniest picture, it has plenty of laughs besides the basic idea, which is comparable to that of having Bull Montana as the prince in "The Sleeping Beauty." This because "Bugs" Ahearne, the part played by Robinson, is only a slightly softened image of "Little Caesar." "Bugs," believing the racket has seen its best days, decides to withdraw and live a life of ease. But he doesn't even get a nod in the swell hotel in which he lives, so he decides a jump to a livelier spot.

Chance decides otherwise and before he is out of his adventure, he has fallen in love, bought a business, rented a swell house and estate, learned to play polo, engaged a social secretary, thrown a big party and reveled in things that he calls "the life." But he finds there are phonies in his new circle, too, and that they have made him look like a sucker.

The star gives a vigorous portrayal of the sort of chap he is supposed to be, and his underdog position in his new element wins sympathy even for a racketeer. You cheer when he scores a goal in a polo game that only his money permits him to enter as a player. You laugh at his discomfiture when he tries to do the proper thing and fails.

Helen Vinson and Mary Astor, each in her own way, teach him things about society, and Mary's way is the better.

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

Picture in the Paper

THE DRAMATIC editor glanced at his watch. It was 2 o'clock.

"And people say this job's a cinch," he complained bitterly. "Here I am on the deadline again and I need another picture to round out my art layout. Who am I gonna use? If I use one more picture of Hope Williams or Ethel Merman or Lupe Velez, even the public's gonna squawk. What kind of a job is this anyhow?"

He dug his hand into a pile of pictures and drew out three. The first two he tossed away with an angry snort. But the third, a picture of a girl with very few clothes, he regarded more thoughtfully. He looked at the caption on the back.

"Jane Doe," it read, "one of the many talented cuties now playing in Joe Fishberg's Bluebird cafe. Miss Doe, daughter of a wealthy Park avenue family, has never appeared in public before and Mr. Fishberg engaged her because he knows the public is always looking for new faces."

The dramatic editor shifted in his chair. He glanced at his watch again. Getting very, very late. He jumped to his feet and raced out to the art editor.

"Here, Jack," he muttered. "Use this dame in that corner space. Her name's Doe. Not bad, eh?" . . .

In a little flat in the Bronx, Mr. and Mrs. Doe had a copy of the Daily Gazette spread out before them. Mr. Doe was shaking his head.

"I don't know, mamma," he observed dubiously, "It don't seem right for our little Janie to be posin' that way with hardly no clothes on. I don't—"

His wife interrupted him swiftly.

"Now, papa," she cried, "don't you start talkin' like that. Things has changed a lot since we were kids and people don't look at those things the way they used to."

She looked at the paper again. And she sighed happily.

"Our little Janie," she breathed. "Right here in the paper! It means that she's gettin' some place, papa. It means that she's a success. And to think that you didn't want to let her go to work in that cabaret! You see how wrong you were?"

Mr. Doe examined the picture once more.

"She does look cute, at that," he murmured. "Make believe the boys in the office ain't gonna be jealous when they see what's goin' on! Janie a success. Our little Janie!" . . .

In a cell in an upstate prison, Convict No. 65891 placed the stub of a pencil against a ruled sheet.

"Dear Miss Doe," he wrote laboriously, "this is from one of your many admirers and I hope you won't be offended because I am a convict. The rap I'm in for it not my fault, but I'm not going to say anything about that because we all get tough breaks in life sometimes.

"I got your picture on my wall now (the one that was in the Gazette I mean) and I was just wondering if you would be good enough to send me a real one of yourself? It would make me feel an awful lot more cheerful if I had it.

"I don't like to bother an important lady like you, but do you think you could do it for me?" . . .

In the subway, two men clung to the same strap. Both of them were reading the same paper.

"Holy Gee!" exclaimed one. "It's Janie! Looka here. It's Janie Doe!"

"Well, what do you know" cried the second. "That's who it is all right. Janie Doe as large as life! Say, you used to know her pretty well, didn't you, Jim?"

Jim nudged his pal.

"Know her?" he replied with a wink. "You betcha I knew her. Don't say nothin' about this, Harry, but if Mabel hadn't popped along when she did, I mighta married Janie instead of her. That's how well I knew her."

He gazed fondly at the picture.

"Always knew she'd get some place. Always said it and always knew it. She's some kid, that Janie. I'll never foret the night we was comin' back from Coney Island in a taxi and—" . . .

At a table in a small restaurant two stenographers talked it over.

"That Janie's okay," said the first. "She's going ahead plenty quick. Did you see that picture in the paper this morning?"

"Sure I saw it," returned the second. "But what about it? What does that prove? She's no prettier than you or I, is she? The three of us always lived in the same neighborhood, and you never heard of any fellows jumping out of windows because of her, did you?

"And another thing. You know how a cafe girl gets her picture in the paper, don't you? Guess you got a good idea."

"Well, what's the difference?" said the first one doggedly. "What's the difference as long as you're successful?" . . .

In the Bluebird cafe Mr. Fishberg summoned Jane Doe to his table.

"No use of you workin' the second show tonight, honey," he asserted. "You look a little tired to me. Sit down, Janie. That's a good girlie. Did you see your picture in the Gazette?"

"Yes," replied the girl. "And wasn't it wonderful?"

Mr. Fishberg flicked the ash from a large cigar.

"It certainly was pretty," he agreed. "An lemme tell you something, Janie — that's only the first of a lotta things I'm gonna do for you. Just because I haven't talked to you much doesn't mean that I haven't been keepin' an eye on you.

"You're a mighty clever little girl, and Joe Fishberg doesn't make many mistakes in that direction. Success is right in your lap, baby, and I'm gonna help you along the right road. You gotta think of me just as you would your own father.

"How do you like your drink, Janie? Straight or with soda? . . .

In a telephone booth, Jane Doe talked to her mother.

"But you don't understand, mom," she cried. "It's not that I don't want to come home tonight; it's that we're going to have a very late rehearsal. And Dolly was kind enough to tell me that I could stay at her place and save the long ride home.

"What's that? Oh, mamma, please don't talk nonsense. I'm old enough now to take care of myself. And besides, I have big news for you. Who do you think is taking a personal interest in me? Mr. Fishberg, himself! It was he who put that picture in the paper for me, and he says I'm going to be a very successful actress.

"You mustn't worry about little things like my not coming home, mom. Don't you see—I'm important now." . . .

The next day, on the dramatic editor's desk, there was a pink slip from the managing editor's office.

"This is the last warning you will get," it read, "about running pictures of cafe girls on the dramatic page. I told you to cut it out, and I meant it. From now on, use nothing but important people." . . .

GIANTS IMPRESS IN LOCAL DEBUT

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Giants Full of Hustle.
Entire Loop Seen Here.
Sewell's Eye Still Keen.
Oldest Field Meet Ends.
Changes in Match Race.
Good Will Dempsey Aim.

TERRY INSPIRES RARE SPIRIT IN CLUB

THOUGH BILL TERRY modestly attributes the fine showing of the Giants so far to the development of Hal Schumacher and Bud Parmalee into regular starting pitchers, the catching of Gus Mancuso, the comeback of Johnny Vergez, and several other playing factors, local fans who watched the New Yorkers beat the Pirates yesterday by twice coming from behind are convinced that one of the biggest items is the spirit with which the manager himself has fired the club.

Bill Terry

Terry has the Giants spilling pepper, fighting and hustling in a way to recall the palmy days of John McGraw. There isn't a man in the outfit who isn't bearing down as if the game of the day meant the pennant, and the collective zeal which Memphis Bill has inspired explains largely why New York today was only two games from first place, after being generally picked in the spring as a second-division fixture. The Giants are not likely to stay up there. Blondy Ryan, a Holy Cross product, is a flossy fielder at shortstop, and saved yesterday's game with a great one-hand stop of Vaughan's liner, but he lacks hitting power. He batted only .207 in 28 games when the White Sox gave him his first major league trial at third base in 1930, and last year he failed to do better than .264 for Buffalo. Byrne James, at second base, with a Texas League average of .298, may be no improvement over Hughey Critz against big league pitching. Outfield replacements are inadequate, and, more important than anything else, four starting pitchers are not enough to keep a club in a pennant fight when double-headers pile up. But the Terrymen won't lose any games through lack of life or spirit. In the matter of hustle, New York is the best club seen here this year.

WHEN THE GIANTS made their first appearance of the season at Forbes Field yesterday they completed the list of visiting attractions on the National League program. Local fans have now seen every other club in the league in action against the Pirates.

To have seen the whole league picture run off as early as May 26 is just about a record for Pittsburgh patrons. It would have been beaten last year by 10 days, as the Dodgers, the last of the visitors, appeared here on May 16, but previously rain had erased an entire three-game series with New York and the Giants were not seen at Forbes Field until June.

MUSHBALL, GOING OVER big in many other parts of the country as well as Western Pennsylvania, appears to have found a particularly fertile spot in Lansing, Mich., where it threatens to drive even baseball to cover. Five mushball leagues with 34 teams have been organized there, while efforts to establish a baseball league failed.

Last year, Lansing supported one baseball league of nine clubs. Diamonds that have been used for baseball for many years are being turned over to the leagues for mushball.

C. F. LILLIQUIST writes: "I read your account of the two homers made in one game by an old friend of mine, Bill McKechnie. Bill worked with us at the Duquesne Light Company before he entered the good old game of baseball, so naturally we are interested in him, particularly myself. I attended the game a long, long time ago in which Bill hit the old apple for two circuits. It runs in my mind the opposing pitcher was Hickory Harmon. How about it?" Harmon pitched the first game of the double-header that day, September 2, 1911, and defeated the Pirates, 8 to 4. McKechnie did not make a hit off him in three times at bat, getting one base on balls. It was in the second game of the afternoon that McKechnie made his two homers, one off Rube Geyer and the other off Grover Laudermilk.

Joey Sewell

WHO WILL BE the next pitcher to strike out Joey Sewell? Probably you could make many a guess and go wrong, for Wes Ferrell got away with the rare feat this week, and if Sewell runs true to form it will be a long time before anybody does it again.

Sewell's strikeouts continue to be few and far between as one American League season follows another. It was not until his thirtieth game and his one hundred and sixteenth official time at bat that Joey went down on strikeouts for the first time in 1933, the third strike being a missed swing. Ferrell, a former Cleveland teammate, who accomplished it, was also one of three pitchers doing it in 1932.

ADVANCING AGE APPEARS not to have dimmed the remarkable batting eye that has made Sewell the hardest player in the major leagues to strike out. Preceding his one whiff this year and three last season, he fanned only eight times in 1931, three times in 1930 and four times in 1929, a total of 19 in more than four years.

Only four times since he entered the majors in 1920 have Joey's strikeouts run into two figures in a season. His highest mark was 20 in 1922. Since the start of the 1925 race he has missed the third one only 45 times. In 6,740 times at bat in 1,799 games during his career, Sewell has struck out only 111 times.

WITH THE CONCLUSION of the I. C. 4-A meet in Cambridge today another chapter will be added to the history of the oldest track and field games in the country. The meet goes back 57 years to 1876, when the first one was put on at Saratoga, N. Y. Princeton was the winner, and other colleges competing in the initial carnival were Yale, Harvard, Cornell, Dartmouth, Pennsylvania, Columbia, Brown, Amherst, Bowdoin, College of the City of New York, Williams, Wesleyan, Trinity and Union. The meet has been held annually ever since, with the exception of 1917.

TURFMEN AGREE THAT the changes made in the conditions of the match race between the leading two mares in America, Top Flight and Tred Avon, to be run on Memorial Day at Belmont Park in New York, will make it a more decisive test.

The alterations were made by mutual consent of the owners, Cornelius V. Whitney and Sylvester Labrot. The two sportsmen agreed that a race at a mile and a sixteenth would be a better and more spectacular contest, and that 114 pounds would be the best possible weight for the rival mares to carry.

THOUGH IT HAS been reported that Jack Dempsey sold out his interest in the Schmeling-Baer fight to Joe Jacobs and Tim Mara for $50,000 and is only fronting for that pair in promoting the show, the former champion insists that he is in there just to get himself established as a promoter in New York and doesn't stand to make a cent out of it.

Jack Dempsey

Dempsey points out that 80 per cent of the receipts will be eaten up with 55 per cent of the gross going to Schmeling and Baer, 15 per cent for rental of the Yankee Stadium and 10 per cent to the Cancer Hospital. It will take all of the remaining 20 per cent, he says, to pay for the preliminaries, officials, advertising and incidental expenses.

"I'LL BE WELL satisfied just to break even on the thing," Dempsey said. "I don't stand to make a cent and I never expected to do so. If I win the good will of the public on the show, I can count that as a profit. I'm in New York to show them that when I put on a fight they can expect and will get the very best a promoter can give. I hope to be in the boxing game in New York permanently. This Schmeling-Baer match is my introduction to Eastern fans as a promoter. If it's an artistic success I'll be happy, and so will every one else. I'll be made as a New York promoter. That's the only profit I'm working for on this fight, and I think I'm going to get it."

TROJANS RULE FAVORITES TO WIN TITLE

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 27.—(AP.)—Reversing previous speculation and exceeding even their own most optimistic expectations, Southern California's Trojans today were favorites to beat off Stanford's strong challenge and win the Intercollegiate A. A. A. A. track and field championships for the fourth successive year.

Since 1925, Southern California has won the classic Eastern meet five times and been "out of the money" only once. This year, having lost such champions as Frank Wykoff and Dick Barber, among other veterans, the Trojans were not figured to have the scoring strength of their arch-rival, Stanford.

STANFORD QUALIFIES 15

Stanford outscored U. S. C., 15 to 14, in the qualifying trials, chiefly by a concentration of power in the weight events, but the Trojans gave a much better balanced and more impressive all-around performance.

In addition, Southern California had reserve strength far superior to Stanford's in two of the events for which no trials were held, the pole vault and discus.

Bill Graber, Trojan vaulter who has soared to the greatest height on record—14 feet 4 3/8 inches—was in top form while his Stanford rival, Bill Miller, the Olympic champion, was handicapped by a weak ankle. The two Trojan jumpers, Bob Van Osdel and Duncan McNaughton, Olympic titleholder, figured to pick up at least a half dozen points.

The dope sheets pointed to U. S. C. scoring between 50 and 55 points, with Stanford lucky to tally 45. Yale, although qualifying only five men yesterday, to New York University's seven, appeared best of the eastern contingent and certain to annex third place.

Where Southern Californians came through flying in the dashes, hurdles and field events, Stanford met a number of setbacks.

KELLER BEATS EASTMAN

Eastman ran third behind Bill Keller, University of Pittsburgh star, who turned in a 1:55.9 race and established himself as one of the favorites for the final today. The best times in the 800-meter trials, however, were turned in by Princeton's great runner, Bronthron, and Pongrace, of Michigan State, both of whom were clocked at 1:55.6.

Stanford's weight men, on the other hand, came through handsomely to keep their team in the running. John Lyman topped his EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE GUNSMITH OF BRAZORIA—W. A. McDaniel, who is a blacksmith by trade and had never seen a gun factory in his life, made a 410-gauge gun with tools fashioned from steel scrap in his shop. The barrel was made out of an old automobile driveshaft, while the stock was carved out of a walnut tree growing in the locality. The homegrown gunsmith is justly proud of the perfect workmanship of his homemade firearm.

SPEED TRIALS CLOSE TODAY

INDIANAPOLIS, May 27.—(AP.)—While late comers stove to qualify for the 12 remaining starting positions in the 500-mile race here next Tuesday, some of the 30 drivers already assured of places when the long grind gets under way sent their speedsters over the bricks at the motor speedway in strenuous practice spins today.

Fred Frame, of Los Angeles, winner here last year; Howard Wilcox (Indianapolis, who finished second, and Russell Snowberger, Philadelphia veteran, were perfecting the performance of their cars. Ben Hill, of Detroit, back at the wheel of a racer after six years of absence, yesterday ran a long test, hardening himself for the 500-mile pounding over the rough course.

Qualifying yesterday were: Raoul Riganti, Buenos Aires, Argentina, only foreign entrant, 108.081 miles per hour; Kelly Petillo, Los Angeles, 113.037 miles per hour; Gene Haustein, Detroit, 107.603; Wesley Crawford, Indianapolis, 109.862, and Sam Palmer, Los Angeles, 105.998.

LOCAL HORSES GET RIBBONS

PHILADELPHIA, May 27.—Mrs. Simon T. Patterson, of Pittsburgh, and the Handley Court Stables of John Beach, of Aspinwall, were in possession of three ribbons as the annual Devon horse show entered the fourth and final day today.

Yesterday, Mrs. Patterson's hunter, Prince H., took second honors in the qualified hunter class and the same horse finished fourth in the middle and heavyweight thoroughbred hunter class.

Princess Pat won the fourth place ribbon in the qualified hunters. The horse was exhibited by Beach.

The horses entered by Charles L. Flaccus, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis A. Park, of Pittsburgh, failed to take down awards.

U. S. NET STARS ZONE CHAMPS

WASHINGTON, May 27.—(AP.)—The United States team went after two more singles victories over Argentina's tennis stars today to make a clean sweep of the already won American zone Davis Cup finals.

A decisive 6-1, 6-4, 6-1, victory by Johnny Van Ryn and George Lott over Adriano Zappa and Adelmar Echeverria in yesterday's doubles had clinched the five match series at three-love for the Americans, so today's singles, Ellsworth Vines against Hector Cattaruzza and Wilmer Allison facing Zappa, were mere exhibitions.

SEAMAN WATSON WINS

TORONTO, Ont., May 27.—(AP.)—Seaman Tom Watson, British featherweight champion, decisively outpointed Bobby Lawrence, Canadian titleholder from Toronto, in a 10-round non-title match here last night. Each weighed 126 pounds.

SCHOOL LINKS FINALISTS SET

The business of settling the various scholastic spring sport championships for 1933 is progressing with more or less dispatch.

Yesterday, Trinity High School, of Washington, champion of Section I of the W. P. I. A. L., moved into the final round of the title playoff competition by eliminating Dormont. Trinity won the second game of the series, 7 to 6, after having taken the first contest, played last Tuesday, 5 to 3.

Dormont plans to protest yesterday's victory, due to allegedly unfair work on the part of the umpire.

In the golf conference, Kiski, the defending champion, retained its Section I title and will meet Turtle Creek, which replaced McKeesport as the Section II champion, in the match for the conference title next Wednesday, the match being carded either for the Field Club or for Fox Chapel. In yesterday's matches, Oliver defeated University School, 18 to 0, and Shady Side topped Springdale, 10 to 8.

Schenley defeated Allegheny, 3 to 2, and remained tied for the Section I lead in the City League, with Westinghouse, which downed South, 4 to 1. Carrick lost to South Hills, 5 to 1, and in the junior division, Latimer won over Knoxville, 24 to 5.

In a Section III W. P. I. A. L. contest, McKeesport walloped East McKeesport, 17 to 0.

Woolslair won the fourth of a series of grade school track and field meets yesterday, scoring 103 points against 83 for Washington, 37 for O'Hara, 32 for Lawrence, 20 for Foster and 9 for Bayard.

The Shady Side track team downed Carrick in a dual meet, 83 to 21.

WRESTLING RESULTS

At New York—Ernie Dusek, 214, threw Frank Bronowicz, 215, 27 minutes; Hans Steinke, 240, threw Ivan Verynhora, 218, 19:35.
At Boston—Joe Savoldi, 203, threw Nek Lutze, 205, 31:19.
At Philadelphia—Dick Shikat, 230, threw Gino Garibaldi, 218, 35:58.
At Cincinnati—Jim Londos defeated Lee Wykoff, one fall.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The best hustlers in the National League.

Such was the collective verdict on the Giants given today by the several thousand male fans who sat in at Forbes Field yesterday while the immediate successors to the McGraw combinations made a mess of our Pirates in their first showing of the season in Pittsburgh.

Buccaneer fans came away from the Oakland Orchard with several pronounced convictions. They were quite sure that while McGraw is in eclipse and fairly well stymied, his spirit carries on in Bill Terry's clever club. Then, again, they were convinced that in Blondy Ryan, Terry has one of the greatest defensive shortstops in the sport.

Before we drop this fair-haired Ryan person it should be written that he saved the New York victory by a catch that has seldom been surpassed at Forbes Field. Towering over the six-foot mark, the Buffalo graduate needed every inch of his reach, plus a near-high jump record and plenty of skill to haul in Arky Vaughan's sizzling liner, which was nothing short of a victory drive with almost any other shortstop around the Wagnerian post.

RYAN HAS "THE PEPPER"

To digress for a moment concerning this remarkable fielding feat, Ryan is just a rookie up for his second cakes in the big show and yesterday was his initial appearance at Forbes Field. He had a short tryout with the White Sox in 1930. But his mates say he is a scrapper and this much seemed to be borne out when he all but tackled with George Majerkurth, who in turn would take on Jack Sharkey at a moment's notice.

But to get back to the fifth inning, wherein the recruit saved

BASEBALL COMEDY

—By NICK ALTROCK—

Nick Altrock

WASHINGTON, May 27.—When Uncle Nick played on the White Sox they were called the Hitless Wonders. We could win a game on two safeties and a wild pitch. Today, history is not exactly rehashing itself, but the scenario is only changed in one reel. The 1933 crop of White Sox are the Pitcherless Wonders. You put their whole hurling staff on the auction block and it wouldn't bring as much as Uncle Tom and an assistant cotton picker.

But the team sure can win games. Half a dozen of the present White Sockers weren't even good enough for the old Boston Red Sox. And when you ain't good enough for the Red Sox, you're ripe for the glue factory. But as soon as they got White Sox uniforms on they were miracle men.

It must be the stockings. The nice white hosiery makes 'em think they are circus acrobats or something. Anyway, they are certainly riding high on the trapeze. But they better put a net under it. You never can tell.

LOCAL NETTERS SET FOR LEAGUE CAMPAIGN

EIGHT MATCHES CARDED FOR OPENING DAY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Competition in the annual Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League race gets under way this afternoon to signalize start of extensive racquet hostilities here precisely as the initial phase of the campaign, the district college season, fades from the scene. Sixteen squads, split evenly between the two divisions of the loop, swing into action while a brace of varsity jousts will conclude the efforts of under-graduate netmen in behalf of alma mater.

Stanton Heights and University Club, tangling on the U. C. courts, looom as the most improved outfits in the Section I chase for the Davis Keg. The Stantonians, with Capt. George Anderson eschewing his customary trip to the British Isles and with E. A. Knoche and Russ Unger, late of Mount Lebanon, added to their list, present a powerful and well-balanced lineup.

U. C. TEAM STRONG

Meanwhile University Club has acquired Paul Barber, Northwestern Pennsylvania champion; Leonard Reed, former Edgewood luminary, and Al McCabe, Wooster College leader of several years ago, to round out a most formidable crew.

Dr. Dave O'Loughlin's champion P. A. A. host undertakes defense of the keg with prospect of tough battle from Shannopin on the Winged Head lot. Billy O'Loughlin, Red and Gray third man, is up-state with the Pitt aggregation, while Bud Leyda, Shannopin fifth performer, is devoting for Grove City College, so that both of the contending combines are left a bit short-handed.

Dr. Jack Lauler will be absent from the P. A. A. group for at least a month because of scarlet fever and Frank Broida, whom Capt. Lampus of the Shannopinders hopes to press into service ere long, will not return from Harvard for pehraps a fortnight.

The youthful Rockwood array registers upper sector debut by visiting a holiday-depleted Edgewood contingent and College Avenue returns to fast company after protracted lapse with trek to Westinghouse to complete the first division bill.

In the lower group, Belmont, Emsworth and Bureau of Mines are brand new to circuit milling, while Minnetonka comes back after two years of idleness and Rockwood and College Avenue experiment with recently recruited secondary delegations.

COLLEGE TEAMS THROUGH

Pitt and Duquesne wind up their schedules by journeying to Grove City and Geneva, respectively. The winner of the Panther-Grover engagement will establish logical claim to the tri-state intercollegiate title, neither combination having been defeated hereabouts thus far.

The Pittsburghers, with Billy O'Loughlin and Nat Ganger virtually certain to cop two singles verdicts and a doubles win between them, reign as slight favorites. The Duke-Geneva affair holds no more at stake than an ancient rivalry, which is quite sufficient to assure plenty of heated mixing. Capt. Frank Casey and Cliff Soisson will be making their farewell appearances for the Bluffites.

TURNESA HOLDS METRO LEAD

MAMARONECK, N. Y., May 27.—(AP.)—Continuing his par-shattering style of play, Joe Turnesa, of Elmsford, N. Y., yesterday shot the difficult Winged Foot course in 71, one under perfect figures, to retain his lead at the end of 36 holes in the Metropolitan Open golf championship.

Turnesa's score, coupled with his 70 of yesterday, gave the veteran an aggregate of 141, three strokes less than Willie MacFarlane, his nearest rival. The final 36 holes will be played today.

STAR PROS WIN

WHEELING, W. Va., May 27.—Continuing their exhibition invasion of the tri-state district, Gene Sarazen, holder of the British and American open titles, and Joe Kirkwood, famous trick shot artist, defeated Rader Jewett, local pro, and Sam Parks, former Pitt star and pro at the Summit Hotel course, Uniontown, here yesterday, 3 and 2.

As was the case in the match in Pittsburgh on Thursday, it was Kirkwood's play that stood out. He had the best card of the day, a 70.

Three Auto Race Events Tuesday

Three automobile race meets will be held in Western Pennsylvania on Memorial Day, next Tuesday. One hundred-mile events are scheduled at the Arden Downs track, Washington, and at Ebensburg, while a 50-mile race and three 10-mile sprints are scheduled at Sharon.

Cummie Trameison is the latest entrant in the Arden Downs race. Twenty-five drivers have entered at Ebensburg, but the field will be cut down in qualification trials. A parachute jump by Henry Langer, one of the race drivers, will be an added feature. A head-on collision is an added number at the Downs.

Both the Ebensburg and Arden Downs races will get under way at 3:30 daylight saving time.

What's This, the Dance of Spring, or What?

UMPIRE COACH MEINE OTT SUHR

Jam at first base as Meine retires Melvin Ott, of the Giants, in first game of series with the Pirates at Forbes Field. Looks like a mob scene, or dance, or something like that, eh? It's one of those freak pictures that come up every now and then during a game, and it's by a Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph camera man.

GIANTS FLASH REAL CLASS

the game. The Bucs had scored two run to break a deadlock, and the sacks were jammed with Oaklanders after two were erased. Up came Arky to spank one of the best drives of the contest.

Ryan was playing a deep field, and as Arky's bat snapped with a fiery shot, Ryan had time only to take one or two steps and then leap high. The force of the ball when it smacked into the pocket of his glove was so violent it spun Blondy like a whirling Dervish, but the rocket was there to stay. It took away at least two runs—perhaps four—as Vaughan can skip around the sacks when he smashes one into a hole.

GIANTS ARE SCRAPPERS

So Ryan really was the symbol of the Giants of yesterday. They came into the ring fighting; in fact, they were so eager to flog the Buccos that Fred Fitzsimmons uncorked a couple of "dust-off" pitches, one at the head of Lloyd Waner, and the other floored Capt. Traynor.

Heinie Meine was one of the principal victims of the hostile New Yorkers. Bill Harris relieved Heinie in the fifth with none out and in the end, Bill was charged with a hard defeat. Gus Mancuso drove the ball over the scoreboard and out of the park for a homer that decided the contest in the eighth. The score was 6 to 5.

Fred Lindstrom's field day just fell short of trouncing his former buddies. Lindy came through with a triple, a double and a single and he handled six chances in the outfield. Fred came close to unleashing a homer with two out in the ninth to force a deadlock. Lindy nicked Herman Bell for a mean drive to left-center. For a brief moment, the smack seemed to be headed for the home-run zone, but George Davis flagged it down to a double.

FRENCH OPPOSES HUBBELL

Larry French is slated to swap punches with Carl Hubbell this afternoon in the second and last game of the series. The Pirates will leave tonight for Cincinnati where tomorrow they will meet the Reds in a doubleheader.

Lindstrom and the Waners were big factors in giving the Pirates a three-run lead yesterday, but Meine weakened in the fourth and the Giants scored three runs. The Buccos put over a two-run offensive in the fifth but Bill Terry sent himself in as a pinch hitter in the sixth and his resultant hit helped to tie the contest again.

Mancuso's winning homer came out of a clear sky. The second batter up in the eighth, he walloped one out of the park. The Giant victory reduced the Pirate first-place advantage to two games.

CLOSE DEFEATS HURT RED SOX

Associated Press.

It has been observed more than once that the Boston Red Sox have been making themselves exceedingly annoying to the loftier teams of the American League.

So far Boston has lost 10 games by one-run margins and has won four that way. If those 10 were shifted to the victory column, the Red Sox would be in first place with 22 triumphs and 11 defeats and the current pace setters, the New York Yankees, would be second after the necessary deductions, 3½ games behind.

WIN OVER INDIANS

The Red Sox threatened again to move out of their cellar berth yesterday as they nosed out the Cleveland Indians, 6 to 5.

The Chicago White Sox pulled out an 8 to 6 triumph over the Yankees, to gain undisputed possession of third place and clip New York's lead over Washington to a single game.

Washington registered a 5-2 victory over the St. Louis Browns in a game that was cut short in the seventh by rain. The Athletics, after seven straight victories, found Detroit and Schoolboy Rowe a bit too tough and went down 10-1.

Pittsburgh's lead in the National League also was reduced as the New York Giants won the opening game between the leading teams, 6-5 on Gus Mancusco's eighth inning homer.

CUBS BEATS BRAVES

Chicago's Cubs continued their upward progress by turning back the Boston Braves 4 to 3 in 10 innings. The St. Louis Cardinals had an even longer struggle, finally beating the Phillies in the fourteenth, when Dizzy Dean scored on Ernie Orsatti's single to win his own game, 5-4.

Cincinnati and Brooklyn barely escaped going into extra innings when Chick Hafey came up in the last half of the ninth and smacked Van Mungo's second pitch out of the park to give the Reds their third straight victory, 3-2.

LOCAL TOSSERS FACE TESTS

By TOM BIRKS

A full card of interesting games is scheduled for local sandlots today. At Greenlee Field, the Homestead Grays will meet Detroit in the first double-header of the American Negro League season. The first game is scheduled to get under way at 4 p. m.

At Dormont, the City Leaguers will swing into action against the Canton Clowns, Homewood will meet Whitaker at the playgrounds and the presence of Leo Mackey and his boys in the East End enclosure should attract a large crowd.

Tomorrow, at Greenlee Field, the Pittsburgh Crawfords will meet the House of David nine, while at South Park, Dormont will play its first Sunday game of the season, meeting the Clowns again.

In last evening's City League engagements, the Gillespies turned the tables on Dormont, winning, 5 to 3. Whitaker hit the ball hard to defeat the North Siders, 12 to 0, and Bradley hurled a three-hit game as the J. L. Thomas nine blanked Homewood, 2 to 0.

The Homestead Grays had an easy time with the House of David nine at Clairton, winning 19 to 4. Brown, rightfielder for the Grays, had five safe hits, a home run, a triple, a double and a brace of singles.

U. S. NET STAR SHARES TITLE

AUTEUIL, France, May 27.—(AP.)—Elizabeth Ryan, former Californian now living in England, and Mme. Rene Mathieu, No. 1 ranking French player, today won the women's doubles title of the French hard court tennis championships, defeated Collette Rosambert and Mme. Henrotin, of France, in the final, 6-1, 6-3.

Miss Ryan also shared in the title last year, pairing with Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, who did not compete this year.

A. M. A. TITLE MEET TODAY

By JESS CARVER

They can't miss setting an entirely new set of records today as track and field stars of the district who previously have not won an A. M. A. title compete in the annual junior A. M. A. championships at Oliver High School's fine field. They can't miss setting new marks because of the fact that the much discussed and cussed metric system of measurement will be introduced, making all of today's marks new records.

One of the strongest fields ever to compete in a junior A. M. A. meet will start in today's carnival. The fact that the annual state championship meet is off the boards this year has helped the entry list for the junior affair, as a hefty outlay of scholastic stars are free to compete. In fact, the field appears to be so strong that even if the metric system were not being introduced, the chances are that numerous records would be set.

The University of Pittsburgh, which possibly will have the heaviest entry in point of numbers, with only Capt. Bill Keller missing, is the favorite to take the team title. Keller is in Boston competing in the I. C. A. A. A. A. championships, where yesterday he defeated the famous Ben Eastman, of Stanford, in a trial heat of the 800-meter event.

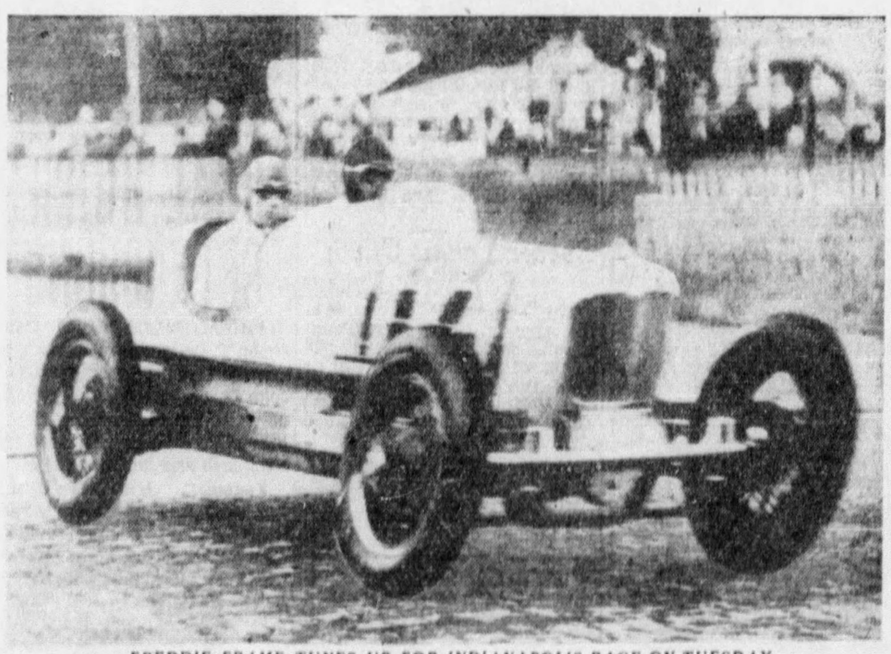
Clarence Lewis, of Rankin High School, who was the star of the W. P. I. A. L. championships in the Pitt Stadium last week, what with taking three first places, will compete today under the colors of the Bellevue A. C. Paul Fagler, of South Union, who won the 220 and 440-yard events in the scholastic meet and placed fourth in the 100, rules a red-hot choice to capture at least two, and possibly three titles today.

The meet will get under way at 1:30 p. m.

DOBIE'S MOTHER DEAD

ST. CLOUD, Minn., May 27.—(AP.)—Mrs. Jennie Dobie, 84, of Hastings, Minn., mother of Gil Dobie, football coach at Cornell University, died at a hospital yesterday. Born in Scotland, she had lived in Hastings more than 50 years.

TWO MILES A MINUTE CLIP



FREDDIE FRAME TUNES UP FOR INDIANAPOLIS RACE ON TUESDAY

So fast is the camera that this car almost seems to be standing still, yet it is going at the rate of 117 miles per hour, almost two miles a minute, as last year's winner qualifies for the 500-mile speedway classic at Indianapolis on Memorial Day. Trials are being completed today. This is an International News Photograph Service picture.

OUIMET'S GOLF

By FRANCIS OUIMET

Former National Amateur and Open Golf Champion.

When a player reaches a certain state of efficiency, he naturally wants to improve his game overnight and to this end he will leap at any sort of a suggestion that he believes will be helpful to him. He seems to think there is a short cut to perfecting his game. If there is such a thing, I would like to find it because I am of the opinion that the only way to hasten the improvement of one's play is by hard hours of practice.

Practice produces confidence and constant practice gives the player the feel and control of swinging the club that is so essential. Experimenting with some new idea is not a bad thing to do provided the player has perfected all the other fundamental angles, but if he has not reached this state, he will let well enough alone and let the new wrinkles appear when his swing has been well grooved and he cannot get out of gear easily.

Frances Ouimet

Gene Sarazen admits, and I agree with Gene, that one of the most important things incidental to successful golf is the grip of the club. There are three distinct grips, the old-fashioned V-grip, the Vardon grip, and the interlocking grip, any one of which is all right, but, if it is natural for a player to use one grip, he should stick to that and not monkey with one that seems foreign to him.

Good golf is played only when the golfer can get out and play automatically or mechanically. He cannot stand on a tee and wonder whether his left foot is in the proper position or whether his hands are right or a dozen other things that I could enumerate. He must stand there and know that when he finally adjusts his feet they are in a comfortable position, he must know when he grips the club that the grip is natural, and he must know that his pivot is all right so that it permits him to swing naturally and with confidence. About the only thing he needs to worry about is to keep his head down and keep his eye on the ball.

KEEP EYE ON BALL

I can remember a first-class American amateur who happened to be in a line of business that kept him highly excited most of the time. In spite of this, he managed to keep his game steady as a general rule. In one championship, in which he was playing very sloppily, one of his friends thought he had changed his swing. He called attention to this, and said:

"Tom it seems to me that your swing is very loose and that you are moving your body altogether too much."

The player looked at him a moment or two, and said:

"Well, if I could only hear from home and find out how the folks are, and if I were sure my friend Smith, got out of his stocks a week ago, I might be able to keep my eye on the ball, and if I could keep my eye on the ball, I am sure my body would not move."

This, of course, has no bearing on experiments by the average player, but it bears out the point that keeping the head still and the eye on the ball is still one of the soundest ways I know to hit good shots, and this in spite of all the experiments that may lead a player to believe he at last has found the way to improve his score.

MAKE GAME SIMPLE

Bobby Jones, no doubt, at some time or other has tried to play many different shots. We all know that Joe Kirkwood has tried to hit a golf ball in every known manner. However, when either one of these chaps competes in a championship it is noticeable he makes the game as simple as he possibly can. He plays very few so-called fancy shots. After all, fancy shots are only useful if a player is obliged to extricate himself from some trouble, and even then these shots are not good, for the results oftentimes are calamitous. It is well to remember that the more simple one can make his play the more likely he is to beat his opponent or score well.

HAMAS TO BOX RISKO HERE

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

Johnny Risko, the Cleveland Spoiler of heavyweight prospects, is going to make his second appearance in a Pittsburgh district ring one week from next Wednesday night, when he takes on Steve Hamas, former Penn State football luminary, in the main bout of the second show of the season at the North Braddock Bowl. Matchmaker Jules Beck closed for this battle yesterday.

Risko's only other showing here was against Sandy Seifert, of the North Side, at Motor Square Garden, some six years ago, when times were good. They drew somewhere around $14,000.

Hamas has been on the sidelines for a spell, but is ready for a new campaign now. He boxes Tommy Loughran in New York on June 21.

BOWL CARD COMPLETE

Beck has completed the card for his opening show next Wednesday night by signing Gene Baker, of Johnstown, to oppose Sunny Jim McVey, of the Hill, in the six-round opener. Eddie (Kid) Wolfe and Tracey Cox box the 10-round windup, Lou Jallos and Pete Gullota, of New York, are in the eight-round semi-final, and Carl Montebano and Red Bush box the second bout.

The program also is complete for the next show at Hickey Park, Millvale, one week from next Monday. Tommy Paul, of Buffalo, boxes a return bout with Jackie Wilson in the 10-round windup and Tony Marino and Frankie Jarr, the latter of Fort Wayne, are in another 10-rounder. Two six-round preliminaries, originally set for next Monday, carry over. They are between Sammy Paris and Jimmy Gilligan and between Shorty Washko and Teddy Mancuso.

HOSTER WITH FOUTTS

Jackie Hoster, of Columbus, who meets Eddie Zivic in one of the four 10-rounders at the Arena, on the North Side, next Thursday night, now is under the management of Ray Foutts, handler of Ted Yarosz. The other bouts on this bill are: Eddie Koppy vs. Charley Baxter, Joe Rugguzzoni vs. Alabama Kid and Emil Rossi vs. Billy Holt.

teammate, Slinger Dunn, by two inches in the shotput with a heave of 51 feet 9 inches. Henri Laborde whirled the discus 162 feet 10½ inches. Nelson Gray, the shotput champion, qualified in both events, as did Dunn and Laborde.

The 400-meter final promised one of the day's thrillers with a newcomer, Jimmy LuValle, of the University of California at Los Angeles, threatening the eastern favorites, Karl Warner, of Yale, and Howard Jones, of Pennsylvania. LuValle featured the trials by racing his heat in 47.5 seconds.

The results of the qualifying trials in 11 of the 15 championship events follow:

Stanford 15, Southern California 14, New York University 7, Yale 5, Pennsylvania, Michigan State, Cornell and William and Mary 3 each, Princeton, Manhattan and Rhode Island State 2 each, U. C. L. A., Fordham, C. C. N. Y. Bates, Lafayette, Pittsburgh, Colgate, Bowdoin, Maine and Boston College 1 each.

Rosenbloom Wins Over Frankie Ryan

CHARLESTON, W. Va., May 27.—(AP.)—Maxie Rosenbloom, light heavyweight champion, had things all his own way in a bout with Frankie Ryan, of Charleston, last night.

Clowning his way through the 10-round bout, he permitted Ryan to take only one round.

The scheduled eight-round semi-final between Johnny Cataline, 135, of Charleston, and Freddy Havelak, 135, of New York, was declared no contest. The verdict was given when Cataline started to leave the ring as the referee prepared to award him a decision on a foul in the fifth round. Cataline's jaw was fractured.

State Increases Ring License Fees

HARRISBURG, May 27.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot has signed the Sterling bill increasing license fees charged by the State Athletic Commission. The measure took effect today.

It makes these increases from present fees:

Club physicians from $11 to $25; referees unchanged at $25; judges from $5 to $15; timekeepers from $5 to $10; professional boxers from $5 to $10; wrestlers from $5 to $15; managers from $25 to $40; seconds from $5 to $10; announcers from $5 to $15, and matchmakers from $10 to $25.

REPEAL URGED BY FARLEY

WASHINGTON, May 27.—(AP.)—The claim that prohibition repeal will "abolish the speakeasy, the bootlegger and the gangster" and "make for a greater degree of temperance," was advanced by Postmaster General Farley yesterday. Farley said:

"Another reason for repeal is that vast sums which have been going to the speakeasies, bootleggers and gangsters will flow into the treasury of the United States."

"This will materially lessen the tax burden now borne by the American people."

Farley, who also is chairman of the Democratic national committe, announced recently he was urging all party workers to campaign for repeal.

OBITUARY

Boucher Funeral.

Funeral services for Charles Wesley Boucher, who died Thursday, will be held today at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Sarah C. Dubbs, of New Galilee, Pa. He was in the grocery business in Pittsburgh 40 years, retiring 17 years ago.

AUDACIOUS GIRL REVEALS SECRETS OF SOUTHERN SEAS

CHAPTER XI.

Another important ceremony of childhood for both girls and boys is the blackening of teeth. There are various methods of doing this. Sometimes, instead of black, a native has bright red teeth. This color is acquired by much chewing of betel-nut and powdered lime. The black effect, which shines like jet until the teeth become rotten stumps, is the result of an intricate process of repeatedly applying a certain kind of earth.

Among the Kols, a tribe of New Britain, the ceremony of blackening teeth comes when full manhood has been attained. The constituents are tawal, a soil containing spulphur, and talis, a pungent leaf. These are baked separately, wrapped in leaves, and mixed together. The mixture resembles coal-tar. Cooling hardens it a little, and then it is spread on a strip of leaf of a size to fit over the teeth.

It is placed over the outside of the upper and lower rows of teeth. The native undergoing this beautification can eat nothing for three days, nor can he talk. The tawal sets like enamel and glistens like polished ebony. During the three days of tawal setting the initiate is kept in confinement, and no woman may look upon him; he must not so much as glimpse a mary.

Although I have encountered it often, even among house-boys and general servants in Rabaul itself, I could never discover any clear explanation of the tamboo forbidding a native to utter his own name or that of a close relative. Ask a boy his name, and usually he will stand silent, though the boy next to him will give it. This tamboo extends also to the speaking of the names of certain of his relatives—his wife's parents and his wife's sister's husband. Unless the person is dead, or has gone away from his tribe permanently to reside, the native will not utter the name; he will refer the question to someone else, who will volunteer the information.

PECULIAR CUSTOMS

I once asked a boy: "Posomuli, what name this longlong fashion belong you, you can no talktalk along name belong you?" Posomuli was generally glad to give information, but this time I merely got, again, the enigmatic: "Me no savvy, missus; fashion belong before."

The tribal customs of New Guinea are many. They vary in detail from group to group. The following outline of the habits and customs of one flourishing tribe will give some general hints of kanaka life in New Guinea and other islands of Melanesia.

Among the endless mountain ranges that stretch into the hinterland of New Britain live the Kols. Except for the occasional visit of a patrol officer, to keep before them the remainder of an existing Gov'men', they are virtually untouched by white influence. They form a little nation by themselves, which is garded as a cardinal transgression, to be swiftly dealt with. The code is satisfied if the lover pays the injured husband an amount far above the lady's original cost. But if he cannot pay enough pearl-shell and pig, or other proper money, the matter is fought out between the two men.

A man buys his wife. The Kols appraise a well-favored and healthy mary at two fathoms of beads or shell money, one shell armlet, two taro-scrapers of black-lip pearl-shell, a feast of one or two pigs, and a quantity of taro. The bride's parents contribute a feast of equal value. The fathers of the two principals transact the preliminaries. Then the groom and his people go to the bride's village, where there is a big singsing, and whereafter he abides.

The slightest incident gives the New Guinea natives a welcome excuse for a singsing, which is a combined feast and ceremonial dance. They love their singsings, and will spend weeks in preparation. Sometimes a number of friendly tribes will go in for a partnership celebration. Wonderfully carved and colored ornaments are made with infinite patience; great totem poles are set up; devildevil masks are brought out. The head-dresses of osprey and trailing paradise plumes are glorious things. Faces and bodies are streaked with paint, eyelids colored, and eyes ringed. Those who are not dancing stand around in a great circle and chant vociferously what is usually the narrative of the singsing in progress, the dancers joining hoarsely. The great garamuts have a place of honor; these are huge drums made of hollowed-out tree trunks, on which a tattoo is beaten with a long pole.

MUCH EXCITEMENT

The dancers make their entry into the clearing from various corners of the jungle, their bodies crouched and knees

MADONNA WITH SAINT ANNE

THE "ELECTRIC PALATE" (Science)

This consists of two different metallic prongs connected to a galvanometer. In contact with acid, the prongs form an electric cell and the current is shown on the galvanometer, indicating the ripeness of fruit by showing its acidity. It can also be used to show the acid condition of the human mouth, palm, etc. It records one-millionth of an ampere — one-tenth the "wing power" of a fly.

BACCHUS AND ARIADNE

The original of this painting is in the National Gallery at London. It was created by Titian (1477-1576), famous painter of the Italian Renaissance. (World's History).

LA BELLE JARDINIERE

A masterpiece of Raphael Sanzio (1483-1520), notable not only for its beauty, but for accurate drawing and perspective, the use of landscape and the traces of classical influence, characteristics of the Renaissance. (World's History).

ELECTRO PLATING (Chemistry)

When an electric current passes through a salt solution (electrolyte) the salt is separated into its constituents, the positively charged metallic ions and the negatively charged acid radical ions. Because dissimilar electricities attract each other, the metal will be deposited at the cathode and the acid radical segregated at the anode. If the cathode has a thoroughly clean surface, it will be plated by the metal. Picture shows a spoon (connected to the negative electrode) being plated with copper in a copper sulphate electrolyte. The anode is copper, with which the sulphate radical combines to form copper sulphate to replace that used up from the solution. (Parsons: Everyday Science).

VINEGAR (Foods)

Vinegar is a dilute solution of acetic acid produced by fermentation. It is generally made from apples, but can be made from all fermentable materials and alcoholic solutions. The acetic acid organism (mycoderma acti), a mono-cellular plant, is shown (after Koenig). It is one of the aerobic ferments and can react only in the presence of oxygen turning alcohol into acetic acid. Vinegar has no food value and is used only for flavoring and, to some extent, for preservation. (Snyder: Human Foods).

MODEL GARMENT FACTORY FOR TUBERCULOUS EMPLOYES

It is essential for the state not only to provide sanatorium care for all tuberculosis patients, but also to see that they are placed in proper employment and carefully supervised after treatment ceases. Prevention of recurrences is as essential as the cure. It is fallacious to recommend strenuous outdoor employment to patients not vocationally trained or physically fit for such work. This picture shows a post-sanatorium factory at Hoboken, N. J. (Dr. Mock: Industrial Medicine). (Problems of Democracy).

STELLAR PARALLAX (Science)

E1 and E2 are two positions of the earth six months apart in time and S an observed star. The angle E1 S Sun is called the parallax of the star S. The nearer to earth the star, the bigger its parallax. The distance of the earth from the sun being known, the distance of the star from the earth can be computed if its parallax is known. The parallax is determined by photographing the star in six-month intervals. The biggest parallax observed is 0.76 seconds, that of the double star Alpha Centaury (nearest star to the earth), about four light years (24 billion miles) distant. (Fath: Elements of Astronomy).

RADIO TELEGRAPH TRANSMITTER

This transmitter consists of an electric spark producer (battery, induction-coil and spark gap) an aerial and a tuning device (a grounded inductance coil and a variable condenser). When the operator closes the circuit with the key, spark is produced at the gap (as long as the circuit is closed), setting up ether waves. This wave motion extends to the aerial, from which they are sent through space. The wave length can be regulated by the length of the aerial and variations on the condenser or the inductance coil. By pressing the key, long or short radio signals corresponding to the dots and dashes in Morse telegraphy can be sent. The radio waves are transformed into sound waves by the receiving apparatus (see Pictorial Education for June 1, 1933). (Parsons: Everyday Science). (Science).

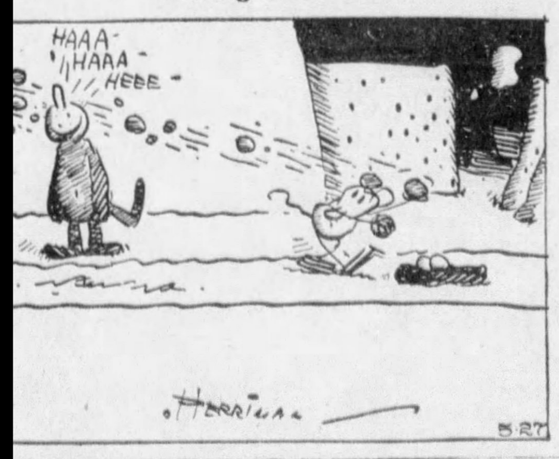
"Rolling Stones Gather Moss"



Bugs Baer

They Both Look Alike

Wish some reader would tell us how to tell mushrooms from toadstools.

We like 'em on beefsteak because you can scrape 'em off easy.

But they're so expensive you might think they were Parisian imports. The only economical method of getting 'em is to pick them yourself.

We happen to remember there is some rule that mushrooms don't grow in fields and toadstools do not flourish in meadows. Maybe it's the other way round. Doesn't make any difference. Since this reforestation thing started both of them have got to grow in woods.

Yesterday morning we picked a basketful of either one or both. We weren't sure because some of the trees were saplings. The wife refused to allow them to be cooked in her house so we tried to give them away to the neighbors.

The lady next door replied she was very grateful, but she wasn't eating mushrooms, ground glass or bent hairpins that day. It does sound suspicious when you try to give away mushrooms for no reason at all.

Still, it was a good test. Nice to know the neighbors are happily married. Let's ask one question again. When you order mushrooms in a restaurant and know they are mushrooms and also that you are perfectly safe, why is it that you kind of wish the waiter was the Governor and could hand you a pardon that came too late? Why do you feel like they weren't mushrooms and might have been toadstools?

Every time we raise the spoon with the mushrooms leering in gravy we feel that the future is about to be short circuited. They may be two different kinds of fungus, but they sure resemble one another like wet carpet slippers. All we can think of for hours is Socrates lying on a couch and asking his friends to pull his ankles so the hemlock will work faster.

Still, if toadstools and mushrooms can make you compare yourself to Socrates, they have served their purpose even if they're toadstools.

Responsibility Placed

Senator Coyne and His Satellites Must Bear the Odium of the Defeat of Election Reforms.

*It comes as no surprise that the blame for the de*feat of the election reform legislation at the recent session of the Legislature has been placed by investigators on Senator James J. Coyne and his satellites. They are charged in a report by Alexander P. Lindsay, chairman of the Pennsylvania Election Law Conference, with responsibility for so amending the reform legislation as to make it worse than useless.

*Many voters, remembering Senator Coyne's ob*jection to election law reform when the subject was broached at the caucus of the Allegheny County delegation to the General Assembly, no doubt suspected that he had a hand in destroying the value of Senator Frank J. Harris' bills to prevent cheating at the polls.

And now comes the definite charge in a report to the Allegheny County League of Women Voters, the Civic Club and other bodies associated in the fight for honest elections that Coyne was the ringleader in the plot to keep things as they are and was abetted by Representatives Joseph G. Steedle, Patrick J. Maloney, Charles T. Dwyer and John D. Scorza in the House and by Senator Joseph G. Armstrong in the Senate.

The voters should remember the names of these men in this connection and see to it that they do not again stand in the way of the movement to assure that only honest votes are cast and counted in Allegheny County. The organization dominated by Senator Coyne should be held to strict account at the forthcoming election for its failure to do anything to guarantee clean elections.

*Apropos of approaching elections, it is not incon*ceivable that the revelations in the Senate investigation of J. P. Morgan & Co. may have an important bearing on the campaign for the Republican gubernatorial and senatorial nominations in Pennsylvania. Several figures prominent in the state Republican organization have been named among those to whom the House of Morgan offered stock at figures far below the market price.

There is considerable food for thought in the fact that Justices William I. Schaffer and John W. Kephart and Robert von Moschzisker, former chief justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and Judge Thomas J. Baldridge, of the Superior Court, former attorney general, were also on the Morgan list. The propriety of public officials being under obligations to a concern with interests as vast as those possessed by J. P. Morgan & Co. is open to question.

*We have an investigation under way in Pitts*burgh which is also developing some shocking things. We refer to the inquiry that is being made into conditions in the foster homes in which wards of the Juvenile Court are placed. The story of the beating and chaining of a baby, the latest of the alleged atrocities to receive publicity, is horrible. Nothing must be left undone to assure humane treatment for these children.

*But it does not follow because some of the chil*dren have been ill treated in the private homes to which they were committed that the system should be abolished and the children placed in an institution instead. Children can be ill treated in asylums and orphanages as well as when taken care of by families, and social workers are almost unanimously opposed to "institutionalism" for young boys and girls.

*What is needed, of course, is a more careful inves*tigation of the homes and families to whom the Juvenile Court's wards are to be confided, and frequent inspections and examinations to make certain that the foster parents are doing their duty. This is a responsibility that the county cannot with decency evade, no matter what the cost. It goes without saying that the inspectors should be persons of the highest efficiency and trustworthiness.

The Pennsylvania Department of Revenue reports that automobiles ran into 15 railroad trains, and trains ran into 44 automobiles, in this state during the first four months of the year. It is a reminder of the peril that lurks in grade crossings and of the desirability of eliminating them. Pending their elimination motorists should remember that the train always has the right of way.

The Department of Highways announces that it has adopted a simpler system for road signs to warn drivers of curves, steep hills, cross roads, and the like. Information is to be embossed in black on a white background and smybols are to be used to denote most conditions requiring caution. The idea is to permit the warning to be taken in at a glance, even by the illiterate and those with poor eyesight.

The Pittsburgh Motor Club, in a current bulletin, calls attention to a little known provision in a bill recently passed by the Legislature and aproved by Gov. Pinchot. It provides that any motorist against whom a judgment is placed for damages resulting from careless driving must satisfy the judgment within 15 days or suffer suspension of his license until compensation is made. This should have a wholesome effect on reckless motorists.

How necessary strict regulations are to keep the highways reasonably safe may be judged by the fact that 41,518 persons who took the examination for automobile operator's licenses in Pennsylvania last year failed to pass the test and were refused licenses. Lowering of the requirements probably would result in the appearance of thousands of incompetent drivers on the roads and a large increase in accidents.

*"No Nice Girl Swears" is the title of a book spar*kling with wit and replete with good sense. It is a treatise on etiquet and the social amenities by one who knows. The author, Alice-Leone Moats, is in her early twenties, and made her debut in New York society only two years ago, but she writes with authority. The book is to be published as a serial in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. The first installment will appear tomorrow.

The startling view that ambition is the curse, not the boon of mankind, is presented by a distinguished scientist in a thought-compelling article in the American Weekly, issued as a supplement to the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. Another interesting article tells how Mrs. Arkell Smith lived for six years as a man, with men, and fooled everybody.

The Gravure Section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph has on its front page a splendid Memorial Day picture—a photograph of an 86-year old Civil War veteran drilling two local tots in the manual of arms. A portrait of Miss Margaret Steele, who has been chosen queen at Wilson College, is another attractive feature.

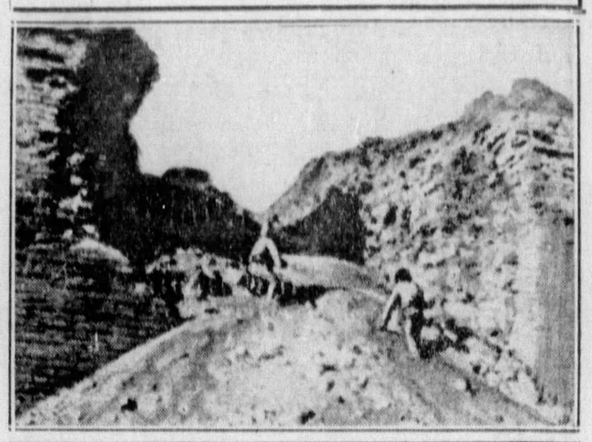
Three Pictures to Remind You

War Has Changed, We Should Know It.



JAPAN HAMMERS A HOLE IN THE GREAT CHINESE WALL

Nothing is more effective than REPETITION. So here are three more pictures to remind you that Japan's war against China should educate both branches of our defense, Army and Navy.

These pictures tell their stories simply. At the top you see a big hole made in the "Great Wall of China." It isn't much of a defense when modern explosives attack it. Through this hole the Japanese will march troops, armored tanks, whatever they choose, while AIRPLANES above keep back any Chinese resistance.

WHAT JAPANESE AIRPLANES DID TO SHANHAIKWAN BUILDINGS

The second picture shows what happened to buildings in the Chinese city of Shanhaikwan after Japanese airplanes had dropped a few bombs.

CHINESE TRENCHES AND ONE JAPANESE SOLDIER

in the trenches, because Japanese airmen, with great ease, have made these trenches useless, impossible of defense by the Chinese in them.

Nations that continue spending tens of millions on battleships, that will only be targets, or that spend other millions on marching troops, except for home discipline and police work, waste money and lay themselves open to dangerous and easy attack.

Airplanes first, then submarines and swift fighting cruisers are the weapons that will win future wars and protect nations when the wars start.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

When Angels Rush In

The heaviest burden a man can carry through life is a light-headed woman.

When a man confesses to an attractive girl that he loves his wife, it is hard to tell, by his manner, whether he is boasting, apologizing or just challenging her to make him change his mind.

The kind of love that flies out of the window when depression comes in at the door is so small that it might just as well have slipped out through the transom.

It used to be mint and cloves—but, nowadays, the difference between a southern man's kiss and a northern man's kiss is merely the difference between the aroma of corn and the aroma of juniper.

Oh, yes, love IS blind! So long as a man is in love with a woman, she fills his whole horizon, so that he can't SEE another woman. The moment he ceases to love her, the world seems full of more alluring girls than he had ever suspected.

* * *

The average man appears to be going through life defying any girl to make him register an emotion that will affect his blood-pressure.

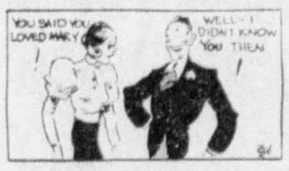
Before Prohibition women were so unsophisticated that no girl knew how many drinks she could hold, much less why a brass rail was essential to the flavor of beer.



To a man, "love" is any emotion he happens to feel for a woman. He can always imagine that he's in love with any woman who happens to be around—until another woman comes around.

This is the heady season, when many an "angel" rushes into a love-trap, where even a fool might know enough not to tread.

Wise Words

A cheerful look makes a dish a feast.—Herbert.

It becomes no one to be covetous, and least of all an old man. —Syrus.

When the mind is in a state of uncertainty the smallest impulse directs it to either side.—Terence.

Honor and shame from no condition rise;
Act well your part, there all the honor lies.
—Pope.

I add this also, that natural ability without education has oftener raised man to glory and virtue than education without natural ability.—Cicero.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, May 27.—Recently I spoke casually of a tender letter from a little blind girl that evoked a choke. A number asked me to print it, and, securing her consent with a request that it be unsigned, it is reproduced herewith, with only a few minor elisions:

"Yesterday was my sixteenth birthday and my sixth year in the dark. My aunt invited 16 very good friends to tea and you were so nice to send me the books which are being read. I am going to try to tell you what a happy time we had.

"It was such a summery day that at the last moment we decided that instead of gathering in the house we would hold the party on the lawn. At first I was timid about the lawn, for sometimes I bump into the trees. It doesn't embarrass me, but those who see.

"I really wanted them to play games, 'backgammon,' anagrams and such, but all suggested we just talk, which I think was very thoughtful. Although I really am quite happy if others about me are enjoying themselves. I don't like to feel I am cramping their style.

"I told them about the time I went to see the river boat show at S. I was just nine and fell in love with the villain of the play. He wore riding boots and a sombrero and between acts sang as he walked down the aisle. When he passed me he patted my head. I felt like the shepherdess chucked by a wicked young squire. For many weeks he was my dream prince. Some one inquired: 'Did you ever see him again?'—then stopped and there was a hush. I felt sorry the speaker was embarrassed. Those sudden gaps make everybody self conscious.

"This letter, I suppose, sounds like Miss Pollyanna, but you happen to know I am blind and it is difficult to make people understand that I am not unhappy without emphasizing happiness. But to get back to the party. We had a fruit salad, cakes, tea and lemonade and more talk and one of the girls played a ukulele accompaniment while we all sang songs that are probably old to New York, but somewhat new here.

* * *

"They must have had a good time for they remained until Uncle came. After our dinner we sat on the porch and I retold the things we said and did during the afternoon. Now, up in my room, I am writing them to you also to thank you again for the books. I suppose you are having a time reading all this patter for sometimes the writing goes bloop when I forget to space the typewriter. I presume you know I write the touch system.

"I have a special liking for newspaper people. My Dad was one and my mother was always trying to write poetry she couldn't sell. It is one of the greatest comforts that they went to Heaven before this happened. It would have broken their hearts to know. Or do they know? I often wonder. I was much interested in having read to me a description of the Music Hall in Radio City. Is it really true that the ceiling changes colors while the big orchestra is playing? I've always been, as you say in your articles, 'a fool for colors'.

"The biggest city I ever visited was Buffalo, and mother took me to see Niagara Falls. A huge rainbow seemed to hang over it and mother used to tell me how I jumped up and down, clapping my hands delightedly, with tears running down my cheeks, yelling 'Wain-Woh.' Aunt just called upstairs: 'You must get your sleep, dear!' so I'm going to tell you about Brixey and, as they say on the radio, sign off.

* * *

"Brixey is my white spitz. He is not conscious of my handicap and if I knock over anything or stumble he thinks it is a signal to play and dashes around barking like he does when I throw his ball. He likes to rough-house. But he has an uncanny sense. If nobody is at home save myself no stranger can come near the porch, but if there are people about he pays absolutely no attention to a living soul.

* * *

"This all if you have had patience to read so rambling a letter. I wish you joy. O, yes, aren't Mr. Rogers and Mr. Cobb amusing on the radio?"

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

"How," says she, "did you learn all the mysteries of the human heart? In what college did you study the follies and tragedies of human weakness, which you seem to know so well?"

And, of course, she expects me to tell her that I learned it all in Vienna or some other highbrow center. Which naturally would boost my journalistic stock plenty! But being in an honest mood today, I'm going to tell her the truth instead, come what may. So here goes!

Where did I learn the 57 varieties of human cussedness?

I didn't LEARN them, lady! I LIVED 'em.

How come I have the low-down on liars and cowards, bullies and boasters, fools and fakers?

Because I've been all those things myself.

Why do I know the wastefulness of remorse, the selfishness of grief, the dry rot of sentimentality—and all the other secret blights that sap our courage and wreck our honor?

Because I've used them.

In what college did I study human weakness, human meanness, human swinishness?

In the toughest, but the most thorough, college on earth—THE COLLEGE OF MY OWN LIFE.

Never yet have I had a degree in any university—but, believe me, world I've a Ph. D. on myself. And that's the most liberal education a human can have—but also the hardest to take.

If you want to know about people, you can find all the dope in—YOURSELF. And I mean exactly that—ALL the dope. For there's no impulse in any life that isn't also in you, to some degree. There's no lovely impulse toward beauty, and no dirty desire for ugliness, which hasn't its seed in you—as well as in the murderer and the thief behind the bars.

YOU AREN'T JUST YOU—ONE INDIVIDUAL—JOHN JONES OR MARY BROWN. YOU'RE EVERYBODY. YOU'RE ALL THE HUMAN BEINGS THAT EVER HAVE LIVED. AND IN YOU THEF[illegible] THE RECORD OF ALL THEI[illegible]HATE AND LOVE, THEIR LUST AND FEAR, THEIR PRIDE AND CRUELTY.

There's the record, right within you—plain for you to read. More knowledge, in your own character, than a hundred college courses could ever give you.

BUT HAVE YOU THE NERVE TO FACE THAT RECORD?

Have you ever even started to read it?

HAVE YOU EVER [illegible]ED TO KNOW THE TRU[illegible]ABOUT YOURSELF?

If you have, you're one in a million—for the truth about ourselves is the last thing most of us want to learn. Outwardly we may seem to be honest men and women. We may meet the facts of life with courage and intelligence. But when it comes to our secret dealings with our own spirits, we'll resort to every petty pretense, shifty evasion and downright lie, to coddle ourselves along.

You don't believe it? Then watch yourself the next time you pull a boner. See how quickly you put the blame on the other fellow! Note how prettily you slick over your motives! Count the excuses with which you salve your conscience. You'll be surprised!

Then you wonder why you continue to get into jams. You envy us scribblers who seem to know so well the whys and wherefores of human behavior. You wish that you, too, knew as much about life.

You can know as much about life. You can begin to know it as soon as you're willing. The big knowledge is ready and waiting—right in your own silly soul.

BUT HAVE YOU THE NERVE TO TAKE IT?

Isn't It So?

In honor dies he to whom the great seems ever wonderful.

Every man has a lurking wish to appear considerable in his native place.

We are sometimes less happy in being deceived by those we love than in being undeceived by them.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Are you irritably positive in your opinions?

Do you accuse those who differ with you of being deficient in good judgment?

Do you express your ideas in a form that admits of no arguments?

"Just when did you acquire a corner on good sense?" is a question that many of your friends are asking.

The mere fact that you seem to think you are unmistakably right, and so will not listen to the statements of others, is pretty strong proof that you are generally inaccurate in your opinions.

You will not allow yourself to learn facts—to be convinced of the erroneousness of your ideas.

You are ready to force your opinions, vehemently, on those who will listen.

As a result you are considered a great bore.

Very little dependence is put on your statements because you form opinions so quickly, without full information based on truth.

Because people don't try to argue with you, you think they concede you are right.

This is not the reason, however; it's considered a waste of time to oppose you—a hopelessly opinionated bore and so irritably disagreeable about it.
